BRITAIN'S BUDGET FORECAST

New Taxation Expected To Be Light: Loan Taking Strain

CHANCELLOR'S STRIKING SPEECH ON ARMS: NEGATION OF SENSE

MR. NEVILLE CHAMBERLAIN

London, Yesterday.
"NOTHING but stark necessity would have made me confess to such negation of common sense and common humanity, but although I am forced to the conclusion that in the circumstances before we are all ruined by our own press forward our re-equipment with all efforts to defend ourselves."

So declared the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr. Neville Chamberlain, in a speech at Edinburgh on the cost of Great Britain's colossal defence programme.

Mr. Chamberlain said: "You can understand the feeling of a Chancellor who has been labouring now for a number of years to build up the finances of the country."

"He has seen his efforts bearing fruit and his anticipation more than fulfilled, and just at a time when he might hope to reap a harvest in the shape of remissions of taxation, he is obliged to divert his surplus to the forging of weapons of defence which bring in no economic return."

Mr. Chamberlain's reflection is strikingly illustrated by the editorial comment of the "Morning Post."

The journal recalls that "in 1913, another year of intensive rearmament, the country spent £49,000,000 on the navy and £23,000,000 on the army, no separate provision being made for the air arm.

"In 1937, the air force alone is to cost nearly £10,000,000 more than the whole of the expenditure on defence in the year before the War, while the total bill is practically four times as great."

"Part of the difference is due to higher price levels and higher rates of pay but the bulk of the increase is due to the greatly enhanced complication of the whole apparatus of defence.—British Wireless.

City Breathes Again--And Again

IT IS NOW POSSIBLE TO FORECAST FAIRLY CLOSELY FROM THE CIVIL DEFENCE AND OTHER ESTIMATES ALREADY PUBLISHED, THE TOTAL EXPENDITURE FOR WHICH THE CHANCELLOR OF THE EXCHEQUER WILL HAVE TO BUDGET.

The civil estimates, at £408,053,605, are up by £28,751,132 compared with the total for last year.

The defence estimate total £277,685,000 but only £197,685,000 is to come from revenue, which is an increase of £9,815,000 on last year's total.

With the requirements of the revenue departments the total for the coming year reaches £619,635,205, or £38,974,432 more than for the year now expiring.

The apparent increase, however, in somewhat misleading owing to the coming into operation of the provision of the last Finance Act, by which revenue and expenditure of the former Road Fund are taken into ordinary accounts.

When allowance is made for this change, the increase is reduced to the neighbourhood of £16,500,000.

Provided, therefore, that the charge for service of debt amounting last year to £235,300,000 remains approximately the same, as appears likely, financial writers in the newspapers take the view that the Chancellor will not have to ask the tax-payer for more than an additional sum of about £20,000,000, leaving £80,000,000 for defence not charged to revenue and to be defrayed under the procedure of the Defence Loans Bill out of the realised surplus and borrowed money.

The opinion is generally expressed that despite Mr. Cham-

Famed Actor Victim Of Liner Riddle

London, Yesterday.
An actor who has made several appearances on the stage in Hong Kong, Shanghai and Singapore is believed to have fallen overboard from a liner in mid-Atlantic.

HE IS FRANK VOSPER, WELL-KNOWN IN LONDON AND THE PROVINCES, AND WHO TOURED THE FAR EAST IN 1922.

Mr. Vosper was on his way back to England from the United States on the giant French Line luxury liner "Paris."

The tragedy followed an end-of-the-voyage party in the cabin of Miss Muriel Oxford, a 22-year-old English beauty contest winner.

As "Miss Britain," she had been undergoing film tests in Hollywood.

FELL FROM VERANDAH

It is understood that in the early morning, after the party had broken up, Mr. Vosper went out on to the private verandah attached to his cabin.

When he failed to return, his friends became alarmed and called a ship's officer.

In spite of a thorough search of the whole liner no trace of the actor was found, and it is feared no-means too early to give thanks for the fact that these abnormally heavy demands can be presented to a nation financially in good heart and well prepared to meet them."

In a leading article on the same theme, the "Times" says, "In any case prospects for the forthcoming budget are entirely reassuring."

M. BLUM GIVES WAY TO ORTHODOXY

Paris, Yesterday.
Following the action of the Premier, M. Leon Blum, in acceding to the requests of the Rightist opposition for monetary reform, general approval of his action is expressed in the capital.

Not only the Left but the Right press express approval of the proposals regarding the monetary situation.

"The Government is doing the right thing," is the general consensus of opinion.

Rightist newspapers to-day declared that the Government has the courage to face realities, and added that M. Blum's former financial plans were unusable.

In expressing approval of M. Blum's action, the Leftist press accuse the capitalists of having refused to help the former plans.

The Government, they allege, was thus forced to formulate new schemes.—Reuter.

BISHOP FRODSHAM PASSES AWAY

Visited China Many Years Ago

London, Yesterday.

Bishop Frodsam, former Bishop of North Queensland and, on his return to England, Vicar of Halifax for seventeen years, died to-day at the age of 78.

Bishop Frodsam visited China and Japan in 1902 to study missionary problems and closely interested himself in educational work. He was a Fellow of the Royal Empire Society.—British Wireless Service.

Threat To Picket British Consulate in Boston

Boston (Massachusetts).

Yesterday.

A threat to picket the British Consulate here was made to-day.

The crew had refused to sail the ship since the cargo, which was destined for Spain, was alleged to consist of war materials. Now the International Seamen's Union have stepped in and declared that the ship shall not sail. As a last resort they will picket the British Consulate if a new crew is signed on.—Reuter.

WINSTON CHURCHILL POLITICAL RUMOURS

Return To Admiralty? Recall of Minister

COMING CABINET RE-SHUFFLE

Sensational reports are current in London to the effect that Mr. Winston Churchill may "come back" as First Lord of the Admiralty in the near future.

IT IS HINTED THAT HE WILL RETURN TO CABINET RANK AND AUTHORITY IN THE RE-SHUFFLE OF THE CABINET WHICH IS TO TAKE PLACE WHEN MR. NEVILLE CHAMBERLAIN SUCCEEDS MR. BALDWIN AS PRIME MINISTER AFTER THE CORONATION.

MR. WINSTON CHURCHILL

Sir Samuel Hoare, now at the Admiralty, is regarded as the probable successor of Mr. Chamberlain as Chancellor of the Exchequer. Sir John Simon, the Home Secretary, is said to be destined for the Woolstack.

The future of Mr. Anthony Eden, Foreign Secretary, is said to be uncertain.

His health is not too robust, and his devotion to the League of Nations is frowned upon by many influential Conservatives.

Either Mr. W. S. Morrison, Minister of Agriculture, or Lord Cranborne may take his place at the Foreign Office.

CONSERVATIVES FIRST

Mr. Chamberlain will, it is believed in authoritative quarters, reconstruct the Cabinet from top to bottom.

Unlike Mr. Baldwin, he will ignore the many claims of the Liberal Nationals and the National Socialists, if better men can be found in the Conservative ranks.

It is anticipated that Mr. Ramsay MacDonald will retire: Mr. Malcolm MacDonald, his son, may cease to be Dominions Secretary. Mr. Ernest Brown, Minister of Labour, will probably go, and Mr. Duff Cooper is certain to leave the War Office.

RUBBER HITS THE HIGH SPOTS

Yesterday's session on the London rubber market was one of the most exciting for many years.

The day's trading, reports Reuter, made the "mad Mondays" of the past look comparatively sane.

After a session of excited dealings, in which the price of the commodity fluctuated widely, the market closed a farthing higher, with "spot" rubber at 11d, buyers, and 11-1/16d sellers.

The excitement was largely attributed to hopes fostered by the strength of the New York market, that the big American manufacturers would re-enter the market.

This is thought to be possible seeing that the smaller American firms have already abandoned their reserve.

The approaching meeting of the International Rubber Committee on March 16 failed to damp the enthusiasm of the majority of operators, who regard the outlook with confidence.

Recognition Of Italy's Conquest Not
Implied

Washington, Yesterday.

The United States Government has decided to recall its diplomatic representative in Addis Ababa.

In making an announcement to this effect, the State Department stresses that there is no question of recognition of Italian conquest of Ethiopia.

The only reason for withdrawal of the diplomatic representative, it is added, is that American business in Abyssinia does not now require the services of a diplomat in Addis Ababa.—Reuter.

Moscow Granting Right To Criticise

MOSCOW, YESTERDAY.
A RESOLUTION TENDING TO DEMOCRATISE THE WHOLE STRUCTURE OF THE RUSSIAN COMMUNIST PARTY WAS ADOPTED BY THE PLENARY SESSION OF THE CENTRAL COMMUNIST PARTY HERE YESTERDAY.

It was decided that while adopting a leading role during the forthcoming elections to the all-Russian Soviet, under the new Constitution, the Party must bring itself into line with democratic practices.

As a result, individual members will be called on to make freer use of their right to criticise.

Candidates for membership of all party committees will henceforward be elected by secret ballot, instead of being co-opted as in the past.

The ballot will be enforced on all party organisations from factory committees to the central committees of the National Republics.—Reuter.

ADMINISTRATIVE ADVISER TO CHINA

Naples, Yesterday.

Senator Alberto De Stefani, newly-appointed administrative adviser to the Chinese Government, left for Shanghai on board the Lloyd Triestino "Victoria" to-day.

He was seen off by the Finance Minister, Count Paolo di Revel, and the Chinese Ambassador in Rome, Mr. Liou Von-tao.

Accompanying Senator De Stefani is a mission of economic experts.—Reuter.

STEPPING OUT

Paris Styles Glamorous When Lights Go On

Paris. THE season in Paris is well under way, with the glittering and extravagantly designed evening mode contributing much toward the success of the gowns, fetes, dinners, plays and concerts which are keeping the city in a perpetual whirl. Probably the most important and popular trend of the season is glitter. No timid, demure shine will do. Great spectacular doses of brilliant encrustations and embroideries used in theatrically amusing ways seem to be de rigueur.

In Madame Toscanini's box at a recent Toscanini concert three smart women were noted wearing Schiaparelli gowns. As is well-known, this designer has been one of the outstanding advocates of the dazzle mode this Winter. It was she who placed incrustations of jewels on long tweed capes and who launched glittering jackets to be worn over dinner gowns. One of Madame Toscanini's guests wore a long black tunic embroidered in gold and mauve over a "pantalon" of vivid blue which showed through the front opening of the tunic. Another guest was equally smart in an all-black gown, relieved only by a trimming of silver kid and astrakhan. A third member of the party wore violet crepe, incrustated with embroidery of mauve, gold and rose.

It's quite a season for sheer fabrics, such as lace and tulle. All seem to show much of the "Southern belle" influence. In them one finds an early forecast for Spring, especially in the gowns designed for fetes and costume balls. Full-skirted and romantically young dresses cut from sprigged or flowered Indian gauzes—they are perfect for dancing—are being worn by gay young things, with satin or faille shoes in sophisticated colours developed in two or more shades. For example, two tones of nottle-green, or three of a bluish slate-gray. Frocks of one-toned transparent fabrics are interesting with sandals of coral faille appliqued with silver or gold kid in a dot motif. Black lace dresses with gold lace belts are seen with black evening pumps enhanced with a one-inch set-in band of matching gold lace.

Nineteen-Thirteen

FOR the present Captain Molyneux seems much absorbed in the styles of 1913 and 1914. He is dressing many of his smartest clients in sheath or pillow-slip frocks of satin made with cascades of tulle at the left side. The filmy fabric is also used on the bodice, making the high neckline with a turned-over roll. This, according to the designer, is one of his most popular models, especially when made in black. It is, however, very smart in brown enlivened with aquamarine jewels.

Madame Alix, whose mastery over the draped and sculptured silhouette is well known, is stressing less black. One of her smartest clients she dresses in pale-blue silk jersey for evening. She works her typical front fullness up into a point on the bodice; which in turn is shirred and draped again either side of the slender wedge. This gown is shown in black for immediate wear in Paris and pale pastel shades, as well as brilliant hues, for the resorts. An amusing novelty chez Alix is a black silk jersey dress accompanied by a little jacket of percale pique—a fabric very like the old-fashioned percale. The jacket, too, is in black, but it is trimmed in a band collar of a new shade of pink, blue or green.

GRANDMOTHER SHOWS HER SKILL WITH A REVOLVER

UPON applying for a permit to possess a pistol, Mrs. Agnes M. Mulligan, 71 year old grandmother of Fort Lee, N.J., had to show the authorities whether she could use the weapon. Five times she raised a heavy 38 calibre police revolver and fired. Twice she hit the target 15 yards away. "She was the first woman to receive the degree of bachelor of law at New York university."

Mrs. Edwin Butterfield, 81 years old, of Orchard, Neb., has pieced 350 quilts in the last 21 years.

Mrs. Amelia Earhart Putman, famous aviatrix, is the first woman to receive the distinguished service cross.

MAKE-UP AND JEWELLERY

WOMEN who ask their favourite beauty specialist about evening fashions in make-up are shown how to use cosmetics to enhance the beauty of their jewellery.

The copper and light bronze ensemble make-up, liquid powder foundation, cream rouge, lipstick and matching powder is being continued by women who wear diamonds with white or peach colour at night.

Emeralds and sapphires demand a make-up that has a hint of purple in the peach shade of powder and lipstick, and a wine-coloured nail varnish looks unexpectedly smart when sapphire or emerald rings and bracelets are worn.

YOUR FIGURE MADAME

Balanced Reducing Programme Saves Disposition While Dieting

(By Ida Jean Kain)

YOU can keep sweet while reducing. When you lose your disposition along with weight the method is wrong, for scientific reducing is disposition proof.

Marriages may be made in heaven, but Grace Moore, the singing star, believes that divorces are made by diet. The battle to stay slim often extends into domestic life, for when the reducing wife gets a ragged disposition, home isn't home any more.

Any reducing programme that sets your nerves on edge conflicts with your real object in losing weight: To feel and look better—not worse. While bringing your weight down to normal you will, of course, draw on stored calories, but this should not affect your health. A balanced diet will safeguard your health, beauty and disposition.

In the balanced menu, the important proteins, minerals and vitamins are supplied in normal amounts. Regardless of your weight—whether you are underweight, overweight or normal—there should never be any decrease in these protective foods. For the sake of health, the reduction in calories is made in fats, sugars and starches.

To assure an optimum supply of protective foods, the following must be the basis of your daily menu:

Two fresh fruits, one preferably citrus (such as oranges and grape-fruit)—or tomato juice—to supply vitamin C. Avoid the high calorie fruits, such as prunes, dates, raisins, figs and avocado.

Two or more cooked vegetables, other than potatoes. Do not include navy beans, lima beans, canned corn, dried peas, lentils or sweet potatoes. Serve the vegetables plain, without cream sauce, and use only the amount of butter stipulated in the menus.

Two or more raw vegetables. All raw vegetables may be used in generous quantities, as they are not only low in calories, but are sources of minerals, vitamins and bulk.

One potato may be included in the daily menu for its alkaline salts.

With low calorie vegetables the average serving is from three-fourths cup to a whole cup, but with the higher calorie vegetables the serving is limited to one-half cup.

Use whole grain breads and cereals for vitamin B. Have three to four slices of bread, cut thin, daily. Cereal may be substituted for bread at the morning meal.

You need milk every day, and one pint of skimmed milk or buttermilk should be included either in liquid form or in combination with food.

Have one egg or a serving of cottage cheese for calcium and protein. Have a small serving of lean meat, fish or fowl, also for protein. The serving should be from three to four ounces. Trim away all fat.

Bore, 2.6 in. Stroke, 3.2 in.
Displacement, 136 cubic in.

THE New Ford V-8 for 1937 is the most beautiful Ford car ever offered. It is built in only one size—with one standard of roomy comfort and modern appearance. But you may have either the improved 85-horsepower V-8 engine for maximum performance—or the new 60-horsepower V-8 engine for maximum economy. The smaller engine makes possible a lighter car—a lower priced car, with lower operating costs—and permits still more people to enjoy the smoothness, quietness and reliability of the V-type 8-cylinder engine.

Improved 85-horsepower V-8 engine—
Drive it and watch the speedometer!

If any single factor contributes more than another to establish the Ford as the quality car in the low-price field, it is the V-type 8-cylinder engine. More than three million owners are now enjoying its superior performance on the road. When you drive the 1937 Ford with the 85-horsepower V-8 engine, you are master of a power plant that gives everything you can possibly demand in speed and acceleration. To-day it is a better engine than ever—with a better cooling system and new smoothness. Yet improved carburetion enables it to deliver its thrilling performance with unusually low gasoline consumption.

New 60-horsepower V-8 engine—Drive it and watch the fuel gage!

The new 60-horsepower V-type 8-cylinder engine is almost an exact replica of the 85—except for size, weight and power. It delivers V-8 smoothness and quietness—even at speeds up to 70 miles an hour—with gasoline mileage so high that it creates an entirely new standard of economy in modern motor car operation.

We invite you to see this new Ford car, and arrange to drive one equipped with the engine that fits your own needs.

FEATURES THAT CHANGE---AND SOME THAT DON'T NEW FEATURES OF THE 1937 FORD V-8 CAR

APPEARANCE—A newly designed car—wide and roomy, with a low centre of gravity. Distinctive front end, with headlamps recessed in fender aprons. Modern lid-type hood hinged at the back. A larger luggage space. Spare tire enclosed within body. Completely new interiors. The slanting V-type wind-shield opens in all closed cars.

ENGINES—A choice of the improved V-8 85-h.p. engine or the new V-8 60-h.p. engine. More efficient cooling system. Quieter performance. New economy.

BRAKES—New Easy Action Safety Brakes, of the cable and conduit control type. Positive and direct—"the safety of steel from pedal to wheel." Self-energizing—car momentum is used to help apply the brakes. Tests show that about one-third less pedal pressure is required to stop the car.

BODY—All-steel body construction—roof, sides, floor and frame. The new all-metal top is a single steel stamping, and the entire body is welded into a single steel unit of great protective strength.

COMFORT AND QUIET—By every modern standard of design, the 1937 Ford V-8 is a big, roomy car. Extra space is in the body, where you want it—not taken up by the engine under the hood. Comfort of the Ford Centre-Poise Ride is further increased by smoother action of the long tapering springs, with new pressure-lubrication. New methods of mounting body and engine make this a quieter car.

Italy's Gold Store

ROME, YESTERDAY. FOLLOWING A MEETING OF THE FASCIST GRAND COUNCIL TO-DAY TO DISCUSS THE FINANCIAL AND ECONOMIC POSITION OF ITALY, IT WAS ANNOUNCED THAT THE GOLD RESERVE OF THE BANK OF ITALY ON FEBRUARY 20 WAS 4,021,000,000 LIRE.

This sum includes reserves of the Treasury consisting of gold given to the fatherland last year and the fund of foreign currency and securities at the disposal of the Institute of foreign exchanges.

The circulation of bank notes issued by the Bank of Italy on February 20 amounted to 15,677,000,000 lire.

ETHIOPIA FUNDS

This included the sum of about 1,500,000,000 lire transferred to East Africa.

The proceeds of the recently launched five per cent. loan, together with the ordinary means of the Treasury, would suffice to meet the requirements of the 1937/38 Budget without recourse to any more important Treasury operations.

The gold reserve in October, 1935, which was the last published figure, was 3,936,000,000 lire.

LOSS OF GOLD

Although the value of gold reserves shows an increase of over 84,000,000 lire compared with the last published figure, the amount of the metal in reserve has diminished since 1935.

Its greater value is due to depreciation of the lire by forty per cent. last October.—Reuter.

SPAIN'S ARMIES AT DEATH GRIPS

Seizure Of Estonian Steamer Brings Allegations

SUGGESTIONS ARE BEING MADE IN MADRID THAT THE SUPPORTERS OF THE INSURGENT BURGOS GOVERNMENT NOW THAT CONTROL HAS BEEN ESTABLISHED OVER SHIPS OF THE POWERS ON THE NON-INTERVENTION COMMITTEE, ARE TURNING TO NON-REPRESENTED NATIONS FOR WAR SUPPLIES.

YESTERDAY, SAYS REUTER, A GOVERNMENT TRAWLER AND FOUR ARMED TRAWLERS CAPTURED AN ESTONIAN SHIP.

THE SHIP WAS ALLEGED TO BE CARRYING WAR MATERIALS TO THE REBELS.

An insurgent warship which was escorting the Estonian vessel made an unsuccessful attempt to prevent the capture.

Meanwhile on land the massacre of hundreds of men on both sides continues with unabated ferocity.

On the Madrid front, while the opposing armies are locked together in a death-grip, the respective air forces are battling each other thousands of feet above the ground. Both sides are carrying out bombing raids and several dog fights occurred yesterday between the escorts of fighting planes.

The Government claim that an insurgent counter-attack on the Jarama River front was repulsed, while progress was made at Oviedo, where the fighting is still of a desperate character.

Further Discussion

London, Yesterday.

At this morning's resumed meeting of the Chairman's sub-committee of the International Committee for the application of the Non-intervention Agreement, further consideration was given to the report of the special conference of maritime experts on the Naval control scheme.

It is not thought likely that the control scheme as a whole will be ready for approval by the Plenary Committee before Monday.—British Wireless.

Stubborn Fighting At Oviedo

Paris, Yesterday.

In spite of tremendous losses they have suffered, the Government troops are still stubbornly hammering at the gates of Oviedo which is still as stubbornly holding out.

A communique from rebel headquarters to-day states that two further loyalist attacks have been beaten off with the capture of several tanks.

Rebel headquarters also strongly deny the recent Government claims of successes at Toldeo and Navacerrada, on the railway line between Madrid and Valla del Prato.—Trans-Ocean.

Hundred Englishmen Killed

London, Yesterday.

Over 100 Englishmen have been killed and 200 wounded in the last few days on the Madrid front.

So says a statement issued by the English Communist Party, which says that the men were all part of the famous International Brigade fighting for the Madrid Government.

The statement adds that English volunteers serving with the loyalists have formed a complete battalion of their own as part of the International Brigade.—Trans-Ocean.

BANK'S COMPLAINT LACK OF OPENINGS FOR INVESTMENT

That openings for profitable investment were not keeping pace with the steady increase in the Bank's deposits, and that activities in Canton and Shanghai are to be extended, with the object of taking an increasing part in China's growing industrial development, were revealed by the Hon. Sir Shouson Chow, presiding yesterday afternoon at the annual meeting of shareholders of the Bank of East Asia Limited.

Sir Shouson Chow said: The net profit for the year, including the amount carried forward from last account, is $938,717.47, which shows a slight decline compared with that of the previous year. But taking into consideration the unsettled conditions prevailing during the early part of last year, I think you will agree with me that the result attained may be regarded as satisfactory.

PUBLIC CONFIDENCE

You will notice in the Balance Sheet that our total deposits have continued to increase and at the end of last year amounted to $18,358,217.44 as against $15,640,630.85 a year ago. This increase in our deposits is an indication of public confidence in our Bank. Our only regret is that it has outrun the growth in the demand for sound commercial loans. In this connection you will observe that our loan account shows a decrease of about 1½ million dollars, while cash in hand is about 4½ millions higher than that of the previous year.

SURPLUS FUNDS

I wish to take this opportunity to point out that it has been the policy of our Bank to render whatever assistance it can to both commercial and industrial development in China. Now that the unification of China is an accomplished fact, I am sure that our Bank will have better opportunities for sound and profitable investment of our surplus funds in China, and brighter prospects of sharing with her in her future prosperity. With this in view your Directors have decided to enlarge the activities of our offices in Shanghai and Canton.

The Directors feel that you will endorse their policy in transferring the sum of $100,000 to General Reserve Fund, thus bringing it to a total of $2,350,000.

The recommendation of the Directors to pay a dividend of $6.00 and a bonus of $1.00 per share is the same as that of the previous year. In view of the low rate of interest ruling at the present time, I think shareholders will be satisfied with this return on their capital outlay.

BONUS TO STAFF

I am happy to report that all members of the staff have continued through the year to carry out their duties and fulfil their responsibilities with zeal and devotion, and I have no doubt that you will fully support the Directors' recommendation in voting a bonus of $20,088.71 in recognition of their loyal and faithful services.

Three Points In Statement To-Morrow

A firming up of China's attitude in regard to Japan is confidently expected in Chinese political circles.

THIS FOLLOWS THE APPOINTMENT OF DR. WANG CHUNG-HUI AS MINISTER FOR FOREIGN AFFAIRS IN SUCCESSION TO GENERAL CHANG CHUN.

DR. WANG, WHO WAS FORMERLY CHINESE JUDGE AT THE INTERNATIONAL COURT AT THE HAGUE, IS EXPECTED TO BRING AN ENTIRELY FRESH AND INDEPENDENT LINE INTO CHINA'S POLICY.

He has already shown his determination to manage his new post in his own way by personally drawing up his statement which is believed to include three principles concerning future Sino-Japanese relations.

These principles will probably be announced by the new Minister on Monday, says Reuter.

The three points are:

1. Sino-Japanese relations should be based on mutual equality and respect.

2. Normal diplomatic procedure should be followed in any negotiations.

3. Unfriendly acts should be suspended forthwith.

Special significance is attached to Dr. Wang's statement on Monday when he will officially assume his new post, in view of the just concluded plenary session of the Kuomintang Central Executive Committee.

TO LIFT THE VEIL

Certain decisions taken at the session behind closed doors, and over which intense secrecy has been maintained since, are believed to vitally affect Sino-Japanese relations.

Dr. Wang Chung-hui will, it is believed, lift the veil from these decisions when he makes his anxiously awaited announcement on Monday.

In Canton it is reported on reliable authority that the new Foreign Minister intends to conduct negotiations with the foreign envoys in China for the termination of extraterritorial rights in China.

Before I formally propose the adoption of the report and accounts, I have to place on record the death of the late Mr. Chow Chi Nam, one of the senior members of our staff, on the 8th August last. The late Mr. Chow joined the Bank as cashier in 1919 when it was first established, and at the time of his death he was one of the sub-managers in the Head Office. In him we have lost a conscientious and hard-working officer.

With these remarks I beg to propose that the Report of the Directors and Accounts as presented be adopted, and that the balance of $938,717.47 standing at the credit of Profit and Loss Account be dealt with as follows:—To pay a dividend of $6.—per share; To pay a bonus of $1.—per share; to transfer to Reserve $100,000; To pay a bonus to the staff, $20,088.71; To carry forward $426,726.76.

Mr. Fung Ping Wah seconded and the adoption of the report and accounts was carried unanimously.

OTHER BUSINESS

Mr. Li Lan Sang was appointed ordinary Director for the current year and Messrs. Percy Smith, Seth, and Fleming were re-elected as auditors.

Dividend warrants will be payable on 8th March, 1937.

The Hon. Sir Shouson Chow presided, and there were present Messrs. Li Koon Chun, P. K. Kwok, Wong Yun Tong, Chan Ching Shek, Li Lan-sang, Wong Chu-sen, (Directors), Li Tse Fong (Manager), and the following shareholders Messrs.

Tsor Shuk Hon, Ling Man Lai, K. K. Lee, Li Tung, Wong Yin Nin, Li Pak T. Chan Tse Chor, Wong Kei Kwong, Fung Ping Wah, Ma Wing Fat, Ling Man I. Lo Hau Fook.

MR. SOONG COMING SOUTH

Shanghai, To-day.

The Chairman of the National Economic Council, Mr. T. V. Soong, will leave Shanghai for Canton on Thursday next. He will interest himself in the stability of the currency and draft a scheme for the development of the resources of Hainan Island.—Our Own Correspondent.

H.K. Gas Ideas Futile?

WOMAN EXPOSES TRUTH

HONG KONG'S ADVENTURES INTO THE REALMS OF ANTI-GAS PRECAUTIONS MAY HAVE TO UNDERGO RADICAL REVISION IN THE NOT Distant FUTURE.

As a result of scientific tests carried out in Cambridge, the methods of providing protection against gas hitherto approved by the Home Office have been exposed as "utterly futile."

With deadly gases swirling around her, a woman scientist wearing a gas-mask, sat in a room at Cambridge the other day, and helped eleven men scientist companions in a grim experiment.

As a result the scientists maintain that the Government air-raid precautions are useless. A sensation is expected when their report is published.

Not until then will the name of the woman who faced death be revealed.

This little band of scientists, working in secret for two months, have discovered that "gas-proof" rooms will not keep out gas in an air raid, that even their masked occupants cannot escape agonising death.

SECRET LEAKED OUT

One of them Mr. N. W. Pirie, who is on the staff of Sir Frederick Gowland Hopkins, distinguished Cambridge scientist, said:

"I understand this is the first time such an experiment has been made in an ordinary room, its windows and chimneys blocked up. I believe the Government department have conducted similar experiments in some structure like a telephone booth."

Dr. John Richardson Marrack, Professor of Chemical Pathology at London University, said: "I know of these experiments, but I was pledged to secrecy. I learn that the tests were carried out in a room made gas-proof according to Home Office instructions."

"Apparently the gases could not be kept out, and even gas-masks when worn a long time were of no use."

Varsity Medical Society's Annual Dance

The Annual Dance of the Hong Kong University Medical Society, held in the Great Hall of the University, proved a big success, there being a large attendance in spite of the inclement weather.

The music was rendered by the Hong Kong Hotel Orchestra. Among those who were seen at the Dance were: Sir William Hornell, the Hon. Mr. N. L. Smith, Hon. Mr. and Mrs. M. K. Lo, the Hon. Dr. Li Shu-fan, Professor and Mrs. R. K. M. Simpson, Professor F. A. Redmond, Lieut. Hon. G. R. Clegg-Hill, Dr. and Mrs. I. W. Newton, Professor K. H. Digby, Mr. J. L. and Miss Smalley, Professor G. T. Byrne and many others.

MEET YOURSELF!

Think it over. Put yourself in the place of the man who interviews you. What does he see? A wrinkled coat, a stained hat, a listless suit . . . all the marks of a careless job? Not when you're turned out in Zoric cleaned clothes! Perfect cleaning . . . odourless, greaseless, and done to last longer. That's a Zoric job, the kind of a job that makes a good impression . . . and keeps up a standard of good appearance!

"The Geisha" Banned As Morbid

Ankara, Yesterday.
The inhabitants of Turkey will no longer be entertained by Sidney Jones' famous operetta, "The Geisha."

The reason is that the operetta is a "product of the morbid European mind."

This is according to an official announcement banning the play. —Trans-Ocean.

BRITAIN'S AIR SHORTAGE Factories Unable To Keep Pace

London, Yesterday.
Britain's aircraft industry is quite unable to cope with the huge rush of orders that have resulted following the decision to increase rearmaments.

In spite of the fact that every aircraft factory in the land is working at full pressure the demands of the Air Ministry cannot be met.

Both Government-controlled and private factories find themselves confronted with too many orders.

The result has been the placing of large orders with firms in the United States.

According to the "Daily Express," contracts signed during February with American firms by the British Air Ministry and private aircraft-manufacturing firms totalled £122,000.

The journal forecasts a decided increase in this figure during March as well as succeeding months. —Trans-Ocean.

FOUR WEDDINGS ANNOUNCED

Four forthcoming marriages have been announced to take place shortly.

Carthage; and of Mr. Albert Edward Banks, of the Hong Kong Police Force and Miss Grace Quibell, of Brampton, Huntingdon, England, who is on her way to the Colony by the s.s. Rawalpindi.

Employment Of Russians Brings Quietus To System

Shanghai, Yesterday.

Tram cars in the International Settlement ceased running this morning as a result of the extension of the strike which began in the workshops to all motormen and conductors.

This step by the Chinese employees follows the action of the Tramways Company who attempted to meet the strike situation by engaging about fifty Russians to take over some of the jobs abandoned by 700 fitters and cleaners.

About 2,000 men, comprising the entire workshop and traffic staff, are now involved in the strike and the system has been brought completely to a standstill, both trams and trolley cars being affected.

The men have refused offers of a wage increase unless their dismissed comrades are reinstated. Reuter.

TIN QUOTA

100 Per Cent. Fixed By Committee

London, Yesterday.
The International Tin Committee in Paris has fixed the quota for the months of April, May and June, 1937, at one hundred per cent. of the standard tonnages, which should result in an addition of approximately 1,600 tons of tin per month to stock.

The committee states that there is a substantial reserve of production available if necessary at very short notice above the standard tonnages fixed by the control agreement. The next meeting will be held on June 11. —British Wireless.

TSUN WAN AREA TO PAY RATES

Tsun Wan has been declared an urban area under the Rating Ordinance and, in exercise of the powers conferred by section 49 (4) of the Rating Ordinance, 1901, as enacted by the Rating Amendment Ordinance, 1935, the Governor in Council has fixed the 1st day of June, 1937, as the day from which rates shall be payable in respect of rateable tenements in the urban area of Tsun Wan.

McKINLEY'S ARRIVAL

It is understood that the s.s. "President McKinley" will arrive in Kowloon Bay at 7 a.m. tomorrow and after inspection, will proceed immediately to the wharf.

Copper Coins Export Banned

The Canton Government has announced the prohibition of the export of copper cents.

It is stated that foreigners are offering sixty cents Hong Kong Currency to buy one hundred Canton copper cents. The usual rate is about forty Hong Kong cents per hundred.

A BILL FOR FIFTY HORSES

London, Yesterday.

A Private Member's Bill to end exports of workworn horses for slaughter or further work abroad—to the extent that it continues after the restrictive legislation of two years ago—passed its second reading in the Commons after the Minister of Agriculture had promised and asked for cooperation with the promoters to remove from the Bill during the Committee stage certain provisions which he criticised.

The Minister pointed out that the traffic was already so reduced by existing legislation that the measure would only affect some fifty horses yearly. —British Wireless.

RECEIVING ORDER GRANTED

A receiving order was granted against the Ching Loong Wo Hop firm yesterday morning in the Bankruptcy Court by the Chief Justice, Sir Atholl MacGregor, on the petition of Chan Hong, proprietor of the Chan Hong Kee and Yee Lee Firms, who was represented by Mr. F. E. Nash.

Chan Hong stated that he supplied ginger to the debtor firm, of which Fung Chuk-king was the managing partner, to the extent of $10,653.99.

They took out a writ after the debtor firm had attempted to remove their goods to another place.

MONASTERY COMEDY BARRICADED MONKS DEFY POLICE

(Special To "Sunday Herald")

Cairo, Yesterday.

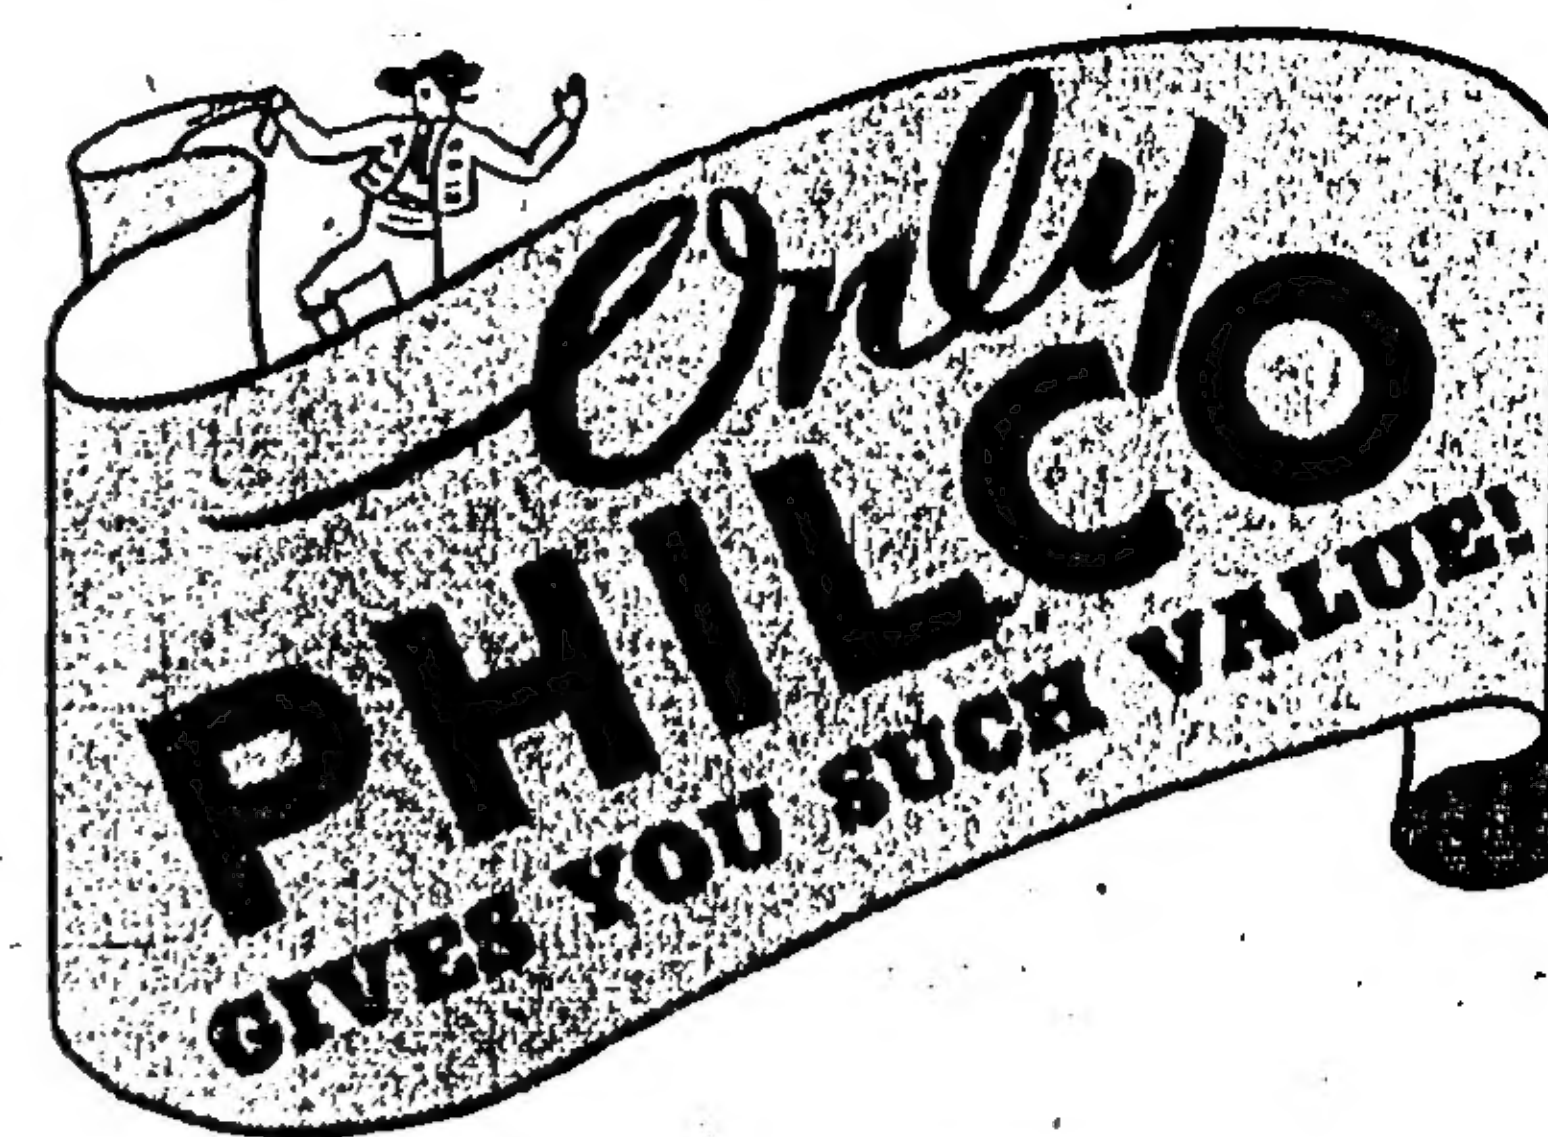

The extraordinary situation presented by the spectacle of monks barricading themselves into their monastery and successfully defying attempts at ejection by the authorities, still continues to enliven the public of Egypt.

The monks, objecting to their abbot, whom the Coptic Church refuses to dismiss, are still maintaining their intransigent attitude.

A force of 300 police has been drafted into the "War Zone" with instructions to eject the "striking" monks but experimental sorties have resulted in undignified retreats.

It is doubtful whether they will attempt a mass attack on the monastery, which resembles a fortress rather than a religious institution, and is thought capable of resisting a prolonged siege.

Meanwhile the comedy has attracted large numbers of sightseers who flock to the district daily in an endeavour to catch a sight of the rebellious holy men and mock the police who are at a loss to know how to deal with the situation. —Trans-Ocean.

that touches your lips...

We all agree on this... cigarette paper is important. For Chesterfield we use the best paper that we can buy. It is called Champagne Cigarette Paper. It is made from the soft, silky fibre of the flax plant. It is washed over and over in clear, sparkling water.

A lot of the pleasure you get in smoking Chesterfields is due to our using the right kind of cigarette paper.
Chesterfield paper is pure, and it burns without taste or odor.

Chesterfield

They're Milder and They Satisfy

Remember this... two things make the smoking quality of a cigarette—the tobacco and the

Although I have used 'ASPRO' with excellent results for years in relieving HEADACHES, I can say positively and with very much appreciation, that your assurance that 'ASPRO' would break up a Cold or the 'Flu' in 24 hours if the directions were properly observed, has been conclusively proven.

The Late Mr. Lai Yuet-chan.

DEATH OF MR. LAI YUET-CHAN

Buddhist Philosopher Passes Away

A deep sense of loss was occasioned in local Buddhist circles by the passing of a devout co-religionist and an old resident of the Colony in the person of Mr. Lai Yuen-chun, proprietor of A Fong, the photographers, at the age of 67 years.

Mr. Lai began the study of Buddhism in its various branches in his teens and he was instrumental in the organization of many Buddhist Societies in Hong Kong and the interior.

When approaching the age of 50 years, he devoted himself to the study of the doctrines of the Mantra Sect, and perfected his studies in Japan under the instructions of the Reverend Konda. With the support of his friends, he succeeded in establishing a Mantra School, and took thousands of disciples, both upasakas and upasikas.

As a philanthropist, he was one of the promoters of the Tung Sin Tong and the Keng Woo Hospital of Macao, and he also established several free vernacular schools at his own expense for the education of the poor.

WOMAN DIRECTS SPAIN'S COMMUNISTS

Paris, Yesterday.

The central committee of the Spanish Communist Party convened on Friday in Valencia under the chairmanship of the famous Spanish woman agitator, La Passionaria, according to reports appearing in the press.

The secretary-general of the party, Senor Jose Diaz, declared that amalgamation of the two largest workers' organizations in Spain, the U.G.T. and the C.G.T., was not improbable.

Both organizations, he declared, had announced their agreement to the formation of a syndicalist government.

Senor Diaz announced that the Spanish Communist Party had a membership of 249,000, of whom over 121,000 were fighting at the front against the insurgents.—Trans-Ocean.

No Attempt To Force A Finish

Benalla, Yesterday.

The two-day match between the M.C.C. and a Victoria country eleven fizzled out in a tame draw after the local team had declared in order that the crowd might see the Englishmen bat.

In reply to the M.C.C. first innings total of 344, the country eleven scored 147 for 8 wickets and declared.

Davidson contributed a bright 62 and retired.

In their second knock the M.C.C. had scored 118 for six wickets when stumps were drawn.

No play was possible before lunch owing to rain.

Scores: M.C.C. 344 and 118 for 6.

Country Eleven 147 for 8 (dec.).—Reuter.

ANOTHER PUPPET GOVERNMENT

Shanghai, Yesterday.

It is reported that Prince Teh is organizing a North China "Government" at Changpei under "foreign" supervision.

The commanders of the "Irregulars," Li Shou-hsin, Chuek Sai-hai, Chang Hai-pang and others are nominated as members of the Government.—Our Own Correspondent.

Sharp Increase In Meningitis Cases

Two further cases of cerebro-spinal fever (meningitis) disclosed by the Health authorities yesterday brought the total to eleven since Tuesday, when four cases were reported.

Dr. G. W. Pope, in an interview, said that at this time of the year a sharp increase in the incidence of meningitis was usual. The situation is being watched carefully.

A Motor Show In Itself

The 1937 Lincolns And Fords On Display

An excellent idea of the tremendous advances made by the motor car industry in recent years is being given at the special show at Messrs. Wallace Harper and Company of the 1937 Fords and Lincolns. It seems but a short while since the model "T" was to be seen in great numbers all over the world, yet to-day one cannot but marvel at the comfort and luxury and above all beautiful lines embodied in the new models.

The models on display are a Standard V8, a Touring Sedan De Luxe, a Club Coupe De Luxe, a Lincoln Brougham and a Lincoln Zephyr.

The standard model, while retaining all the beauty of last year's model, includes several new ideas which emphasise the study of every detail calculated to enhance the comfort and convenience of owners. The dashboards show a marked improvement, all the controls and switches being easy of access.

The starter, at one time placed in rather an awkward position and operated by foot, is now a small button on the right of the dashboard. Windcreens have been set at an angle calculated to eliminate to a very great extent, the glare from the lights of oncoming cars. The adjustable front seat is bound to be a tremendous boon to the short driver.

The finish of the window trim has been vastly improved and the handbrake is now on the right of the dashboard, eliminating blind groping for the lever which is necessary when it is placed between the driver and a passenger.

The opening of the bonnet from the top instead of at the side should prove a great convenience to the owner-driver. Acknowledged to be the finest car built in the United States, Lincoln have two models on view which are marvels of modern car design. A Brougham V 12, with a body by "Bryan," imported on the order of Mr. Loke Yuen Lok is a revelation. The engine is of 46.8 horsepower, S.A.E. rating, and develops 150 horsepower. It is heat-controlled by means of engine-bonnet shutters which are operated by thermostatic automation. Special innovations include a telephone from the rear seat to the driver, elaborate interior fittings, lighting operated by the opening and closing of the door and the last word in upholstered comfort.

The Lincoln Zephyr is built on amazingly beautiful lines and has to be seen to be really appreciated. The display which started yesterday and concludes to-day, is an education in modern car progress.

MR. HAYDEN LEAVES

Mr. J. J. Hayden, Puisne Judge in Hong Kong, left on the P. and O. Naldora yesterday on route to Kenya, where he will take up his new appointment of Judge of the Supreme Court, accompanied by Mrs. Hayden.

General Sir Alexander Godley and Lady Godley also left the Colony on the Naldora, other passengers being Mr. and Mrs. F. D. Angus, Colonel V. R. Burkhart, Eng. Comm. and Mrs. Moy, Mr. and Mrs. Pegg, Mr. G. R. Sayer, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Shewan and Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Westlake.

ALARMING INCIDENT

CAR FIRED ON NEAR SHANGHAI TWO AMERICANS IN PARTY

Six well-known Shanghai residents narrowly escaped death when gunmen opened fire on their car on the Hangchow highway, three miles from Shanghai.

Although two bullets hit the windshield and door of the car, the occupants escaped without serious injuries when the driver drove on at top speed.

The victims of the attempted hold-up and shooting are:

Miss Helen (Tsing Ying) Tsang, daughter of Mr. Ohang Chin-kiang, C.E.C. member;

Mr. William Golding, General Manager of the Commercial Express Company;

Mr. L. Rifkin, American, of Manila;

Mrs. Y. H. Woo, daughter of the late Managing Director of the Wing On Company, and her husband, and Miss L. Tolbi.

The party was returning after a trip to Hangchow. On the highway at about 7.50 o'clock, they saw three men on the road waving for them to stop.

Mr. Woo, driving the car, slowed down, thinking that the trio were police or garrison officers.

Before the car came to a complete standstill, a shot rang out which hit the windshield.

The shattered glass cut Miss Tsang and Mrs. Woo who were sitting in the front seats.

Realizing that they were being held up, Mr. Woo "stepped on the gas."

Another shot was fired by the gunman, followed a second later by a third pistol report. One of these shots hit the rear door.

Mrs. Woo, with her face out, was later taken to a hospital. She was given first aid treatment and allowed to leave.

PEAK SCHOOL INNOVATION

An innovation was introduced at Peak School yesterday when Mr. Gerald Sydney gave a special recital for the benefit of the children.

The programme was both entertaining and instructive, consisting of vocal and piano pieces.

Tempt Tiny Appetites with Gay, Bright-Coloured Salads

By FRANCES LEE BARTON

Children Readily Eat Meals that Look Colourful and Interesting

Of course you know how much children like colour. And when you give them bright, attractive dishes to eat, you'll find that no urging is necessary.

It's easy to put your persuasion into the food, instead of into words. If you use Jell-O. And what a variety of colours you have to choose from! The six delicious Jell-O flavours run from clear sea green through yellow, orange, and red to glowing crimson and deep ruby. And don't forget that bright-coloured dishes appeal to grown-ups almost as much as to children.

These Jell-O salads are easy to prepare, and contain many of the vital food elements every child needs. And with Jell-O on the table, you'll find it easier to get children to eat the other more nourishing foods they often refuse. Here's a pear and cherry salad that tastes as good as it looks. Of course you can use other fruits if you happen to have them.

Pear and Cherry Salad

1 package Lemon Jell-O
1 pint warm water
6 maraschino cherries, cut in eighths
1 cup sliced tinned pears

Dissolve Jell-O in warm water. Chill. When slightly thickened, fold in cherries and pears. Turn into mould. Chill until firm. Unmould on crisp lettuce. Garnish with creamy mayonnaise. Serves 6.

Prune Juice is good for growing children, but children don't always like what is good for them! However, you'll have no trouble getting your children to like prune juice if you present it in this attractive form. It's really a dessert, but you can serve it as a special dish with any meal. And you can make it almost as fast as the children can eat it.

Amber Russia

1 package Orange Jell-O
1½ cups warm stewed prune juice
4 tablespoons sugar
Dash of salt
Juice of 1 lemon
Maraschino cherry juice to make 1½ cups

Dissolve Jell-O in warm prune juice. Add sugar, salt, and fruit juices. Turn into individual moulds. Chill until firm. Unmould. Serve with whipped cream, if desired. Serves 4.

Note: If desired, lemon juice may be omitted and amount of prune juice increased from 1½ cups to 1¾ cups.

The only trouble you'll have with these dishes is that the children may exclaim: "Oh Mother, it looks so pretty that it's a shame to eat it!"

A recent picture of Mrs. T. White, of the Talkoo Dock and Engineering Company. (Rialto Studio).

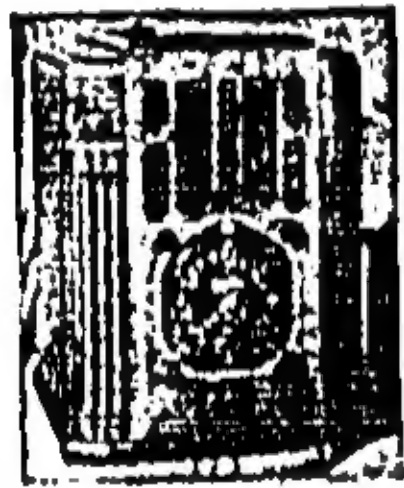

MRS. L. W. Amps left Hong Kong last week on board the "Gneisenau" to spend a few months in England. Another passenger to leave by the same ship was Mr. W. F. Webb, of Alex. Ross and Co., who will be away until September.

LITTLE NOTES of Great Importance

In the heart of Hollywood is one of America's unique institutions, the home of the COLONIAL DAMES, equipped with scientific instruments to make fine cosmetics. Exquisite face powders, rouges, lipstick, nail polish and the famous Colonial Dames all-purpose cream with its two thousand units of certified vitamin D, and the salon cream containing ten thousand units of this precious element of a youthful skin. You can have them now right here in Hong Kong from WATSON'S DISPENSARY. Watch this column carefully, I have a lot more to tell you about the Colonial Dames preparations.

This is the season of the sales and while you are all anticipating the surprises of the new season your enthusiasm doesn't carry you away to the point of forgetting what good things you can pick up in the sales. And don't forget bargains don't always shout at you from the windows, sometimes they are neatly tucked away in less conspicuous places. I don't mean to say that you need a chart to find RIVELLE'S in the Gloucester Arcade — and when you get there — you'll find winter and spring frocks, evening gowns and — all you want at rock bottom prices.

The Zenith 1937 Radio is "the" one — no doubt about that. The newest in the world... but made by the radio's oldest manufacturer. There certainly couldn't be a finer radio than a Zenith... visit the INTERNATIONAL RADIO, SALES AND SERVICE, 27 Hankow Road, Kowloon, and find out about it. You may start with a small Zenith and pave the way for an All Wave World-wide Automatic Radio-Gram. But whatever it is, let your slogan be: "A Zenith in the home." There's no end to the pleasure you'll have, for its a radio famous for its selectivity, and tone quality. Cash, or terms arranged to suit.

The smartest, gayest of shorts and slacks, the first of the season! Loads of chic spring and summer hats, swell handbags all showing the imprint of the new season, evening bags, and this and that. All at MAIZEE'S — our American shop, where one can always find a selection so new and so versatile. Yes, this will be a week of good shopping if you go to MAIZEE'S... There are heaps of new things for you.

You can dress smartly — you can have lovely features — but if your skin is marred by pimples, oiliness, large pores, blackheads or other common flaws, much of your charm is lost. Thousands every day are turning to NOXZEMA skin cream and find that it is a wonderful help in correcting these beauty-destroying faults. NOXZEMA is wonderfully soothing. It relieves most itching irritations, softens rough, chapped skin, relieves burns and bruises and perspiration odours. Men find it a shaving comfort. Sole Distributors: United Traders, Pedder Building.

A good selection of new books this week at BREWER'S BOOK SHOP! There's "The White Banner" by Lloyd C. Douglas, a stirring story of an American family. "A Doctor's Odyssey" by Victor Heiser, a doctor's adventures in 45 countries... and a book, in a thousand! The wonderful life history of a scientist who never forgot that he was human. "Salavin" by Georges Duhamel, one of the greatest novels published in England in the last year, indeed a major work of literature. And the unusual book "In My Path" by Malliday Sutherland. The "World Almanac 1937" is there too.

The last day of the Annual Meeting at Happy Valley, though damp and misty an afternoon, was surely one of the most crowded of the week. It is the one day in the year that children are allowed and, judging by the numbers that were there, racing must have its interest for even the very young.

It was too unpleasant a day for there to be anything in the nature of summery frocks, and coats and skirts or suits were the most suitable attire. Mrs. W. T. Stanton had chosen black and white for her ensemble; a coat of thick white corded silk with a black skirt and a black velvet cap coming well over on one side. Her daughter, Miss Lola Pearson, was wearing a black cloth coat and skirt with a cream coloured silk blouse.

A dark red frock, with a hat exactly to tone was being worn by Miss Inghel Goode, who was with her mother. Mrs. Goode was in a long blue coat with a fur collar and a blue hat.

Mrs. Amps was wearing a brown coat and skirt, and a felt hat of the same shade. Mrs. Hopkinson was in a black costume. A dark blue suit of a thin material with short full sleeves looked very well on Miss K. Simmons; a pinky white blouse went with it, and a smart little blue cap.

One very striking dress we noticed was of a dull peacock blue crepe with a brilliant brick coloured velvet sash tied slightly on one side, whose ends fell nearly to the hem. The front of the frock was slit from the hem halfway up the skirt to show an inserted slashing of the same coloured velvet.

Mrs. Waymbuth was looking very smart in a pink wool frock with a dark blue tie at the neck, and belt, and a dark blue hat. Mrs. Mainwaring's black frock with a scarlet belt was very successful, and not the least part of her outfit was the becoming little black hat, with a crisp eye veil.

Mr. and Mrs. E. G. Smith Wright are going home on leave very shortly. Mr. Smith Wright is, of course, well known as a first rate amateur theatrical producer and actor. He won a great reputation in Shanghai in this line, and it did not take long before he established it in Hong Kong, and became an important figure in the local Amateur Dramatic Club.

Among those who left by the J.C.J. Line ship "Tijbadak" on Tuesday were Mr. and Mrs. H. S. Jones, bound for Sourabaya. Mr. Jones is connected with the Hong Kong Electric Company. Other passengers on the same ship were Mr. W. B. Fraser and Mrs. Fraser, the well known New Zealand singer, who are going on a visit to Bali.

PERSONALIA

Last Sunday, instead of the usual drag lines, the Fanning Hunt held a Paper Chase, for which Mrs. W. T. Stanton and Mr. J. J. Palmer had kindly presented silver cups to the first Australian and China ponies respectively to pass the winning post.

The Meet was at Dill's Corner at 3 p.m., the paper having been laid over a long course of approximately ten miles by Mr. Palmer.

Among those who competed were Mrs. Akroyd-Hunt, Mrs. Anderson, Mr. Butcher, Mr. Challinor, Captain Clarke, Miss Pearson, Lieutenant-Commander Grieve, Captain Harrison, Miss Jonas, Major Murphy, Mr. Murphy, Mr. Lee, Mr. Watson, Mr. Stanton, Mr. Rickard, Mr. MacKenzie, Captain Swinburne, Mrs. Swinburne, Mr. Weldon.

The paper was followed up to Mount Kirkpatrick, where the trail bore right. About here Mr. Nelson's mare landed badly from a drop and gave him a fall. She ran quite a long way with the Hunt before being captured by Mrs. Akroyd-Hunt and returned to her owner. By a rather circuitous route the line led to Lo Wu Camp, where green paper indicated a check. The Hunt cast around and soon the "Tally Ho!" was given on the road to the railway. Crossing the line, the paper was followed along Orb Hill, over the paddy and across the road to Table Hill where it circled back to the Frontier Road. The line now followed the road more or less continuously beyond North Gap to the Border Police Station, where a second check was shown by green paper.

After casting, the Hunt came to The Gallops and here, from what had been plain sailing, things began to go wrong. Quite a large proportion of the field followed Mr. Potts along the usual route to the Stables. The rest of the field, however, continued to cast and after some time, Mrs. Anderson, with Mrs. Akroyd-Hunt and Mr. Rickard "Tally Ho-ed" the right trail leading well to the left of the Gallops and coming over the long valley of paddy.

Mr. Sachin Chan and his charming bride, formerly Miss Yuen Nown, taken by a staff photographer outside the Supreme Court Registry after their marriage last Monday. ("Herald" photo).

In the meantime, Mr. Potts' faction, believing themselves well in front, began at Kitten Hill to race seriously for the flags on the far side of the river. Mr. Potts came in first, closely followed by Wing Commander Dalzell and Major Oliver. Among this lot were Mr. Nelson, Mr. Marson, Mrs. Rybot, Mr. Macgregor, Mr. Minshall Ford, Miss Beryl Fair. These were, however, all disqualified for not having followed the proper line.

The winner on a China pony was Miss Pearson. No Australian pony qualified.

The rain which had been falling nearly the whole of Wednesday morning held off for the Meet at Kitten Hill, when Miss Lois Pearson and Mr. Erik Nelson laid the drag lines.

The first trail led hounds to skirt Copse Hill and, coming to Puppy Hill, turned left and went straight over the top and down the other side, leaving The Orchards on the left. From here it followed the track along the base of the hills and crossing a narrow paddy valley finished not far from the village of Wo King Shan.

The second line made a large left-handed circle back to the Stables. The going was very heavy after the rain, but the scent was lying well and hounds hunted fast, particularly on the last line, except for a momentary check at a village.

Mr. Rickard took a fall towards the end of this hunt, when his horse put its forelegs into a small unseen ditch and fell. Luckily, in spite of an alarming appearance, Mr. Rickard was not hurt, but immediately remounted.

A newcomer to the Hunt on this afternoon was Miss Eliza Bell, who was in the lead.

At the Races: Miss Olga Towse, Mrs. C. D. Chapman and Frau A. Gelewsky.

Miss Olga Towse, assistant secretary of the League of Nations Union in New South Wales, returned to Australia by the s.s. Tandu on Friday, on the expiration of six months' leave, during which period she made an extensive tour of Japan and China.

Miss Towse is an Australian born Chinese and this was the first time that she had paid a visit to her father's native country. It is notified that the Hon. Mr. R. A. C. North has resumed duty as Secretary for Chinese Affairs.

LITTLE NOTES of Great Importance

Last week I told you of my latest discovery: THE WESSON CO., LTD. Now I have for you some more interesting news about them. Their economy sale, which ended last Friday, brought marvellous proofs of the popularity of this firm's policy. During the sale 122 new customers registered, 122 new people became convinced that the WESSON CO., LTD., is the place to buy your groceries. 122 economically minded persons can't be wrong — go and take a look for yourself, weigh the evidence and — I am sure — you will join the crowd.

There'll be cold weather yet — and! PAUL RENNET'S are having a CLEARANCE SALE of winter frocks, coats, suits, shoes, stockings — and all at fantastically low prices. There's still a big choice left for you all, no matter what your size or taste or colour preference. All things for the discriminating woman who does not often find a bargain that comes up to her standard of smartness. PAUL RENNET'S sale begins to-morrow — call early! It will be worthwhile!

If you are looking for your favourite dispensary, where they so competently make up your doctors' prescriptions, and where you also get all your toilette requisites, — of course you know that I am talking of the GRAND DISPENSARY — don't be alarmed if you do not find them at the accustomed place. The GRAND DISPENSARY has moved to more convenient quarters. Still in the China Building, but now in the premises formerly occupied by the Silk Store, at the corner of China Building adjacent to the Queen's Theatre. Only the place has changed; the policy and service are the same.

How fascinating it is to look into the windows of the JADE TREE, but it is nothing short of a revelation to go inside and walk through their rooms. All the poetry, charm and romance of the Far East is there, worked by the master craftsmen of China into dazzling jewellery, lacquer-screens, cabinets, embroidery, glass and silverware. Nothing of the commonplace or commercialised, but all carefully selected by the expert and keen-eyed Mrs. Woods who travels to the remotest corners of China to find these things for the JADE TREE.

LANE, CRAWFORD'S very often have pleasant surprises for you, but here is one of the grandest to date! ARISTOC stockings! Yes, they are bringing them to you for the first time, and in all the new spring shades. You've heard a lot about Aristoc... you've only to see them to long to wear them, they are so wonderfully fine, so very feminine with their glamorous sheen! Call early, for they are bound to go in record time.

Don't let the children run risks! Perfect health... what happier thought? Protect them against the dangerous and all too common worms which afflict the human system, depriving the child of the full nourishment of his food, so that he becomes emaciated, pale and yellow in complexion, with a very variable appetite. He may then suffer from indigestion, nausea, feverishness, grinding of the teeth, he will cry for no apparent reason, be constantly irritable, indeed, far from happy. But WATSON'S WORM BONBONS will set all that right, and act as a preventive. And the BONBONS are only 8 cents each.

FOOD "WASHED" WITH PURE AIR

Constantly Circulating

in the Modern
Air Conditioned
Refrigerator

Certain stored foods pass off impurities, unpleasant in odor, which are quickly absorbed by other foods. Thus food, to remain impurity-free and to prevent decay, must be kept in air that is constantly purified as well as chilled. Cold alone is not enough!

The new OLYMPIC ICE Refrigerator, utilizing SIX-SIDED REFRIGERATION, keeps vitalized fresh air constantly circulating around your food. It "picks up" odors and impurities, carries them to the melting ice film, where they are absorbed and eliminated through the drain pipe. Food odors cannot interchange!

Too, the new OLYMPIC Air Conditioned Refrigerator maintains the correct balance of moisture in the air, preventing foods from drying out. Foods retain their natural flavors, juices and vitamins.

Our Ice Service Man will gladly demonstrate the new OLYMPIC Refrigerator.

The Rev. J. N. Bryan Lewis
Says

Money Is Queer Stuff

MONEY is queer stuff. The opposites meet in it so strikingly. It may be the most cruel exacting tyrant. It may be the most faithful, intelligent servant. If it comes into a man's life unaccompanied by a high, controlling, motive power it may have the most peculiar effects upon him.

It can put hard wrinkles on his face, and tie knots in them. It can dwarf a warm hand, into a muscle-bound fist. Sometimes it strikes the hand with a kind of palsy while in the pocket, so that it cannot be withdrawn. Sometimes there is a violent cramp, or kind of "pen-paralysis," that prevents the signing of the name—to certain sorts of cheques.

If, on the other hand, it comes into a man's possession accompanied by a pure unselfish motive that controls, it comes nearer to omnipotence than anything that we handle, particularly if God be that motive.

Colour Of Ownership

In one of His parables—that of the dishonest overseer of a wealthy man's estate, Christ has left us some very sound ideas about money. He ended the parable with the words, "somewhat freely translated—'Make to yourselves friends by means of money, which the unrighteous world reckons riches, so that when it fails they may receive you into the eternal tabernacles.'"

Money is not riches, though the world persists in thinking that it is. Neither is money unrighteousness. It is neither righteous nor unrighteous. It gets its moral quality from the man owning it for the time being. It is as he is. It takes on the colour of its ownership.

What He meant was "Exchange your money into the kind of coin that is current in the kingdom of God."—Exchange your gold into lives. If you want to be wealthy buy letters of credit that will be good then. "That when it fails," He says, with fine discernment. Money will fail. There is an end to the power of gold in itself. It is better to use it before it's purchasing power is finished. When true values are being settled, it won't be worth the space it occupies.

Stripped To The Skin

Some men spend their whole lives and strength and talents in making money and hoarding it. They pass out of this life stripped to the skin. In the other world, where wealth is reckoned otherwise than in currency, they enter as sheer paupers. The purchasing power of their wealth stopped at the line of their departure. It failed.

Christ's advice is to buy up some of the currency they use in the next world, so that we may have some wealth when we get there. In plain words take the same precautions in this connection that we take when we go abroad, and we get our travellers cheques, or letters of credit.

What we get and keep for the sake of having, we lose, for we leave it behind. What we give times, and away freely for His sake, and in His service, we will find, by and that she recognised and obeyed by, that we have kept, for we have that inner voice. And that is the sent it ahead in a changed form, one law of giving as of all life.

Adjustment Of Values

There will certainly be a strange readjustment of values. Some who have been accounted very wealthy here, will be reckoned amongst the very poor. Some who have been reckoned poor will be found to be millionaires, not dollar-millionaires, but life-millionaires. It would be a pretty good thing for all of us, to get a little better acquainted with the foreign exchange desks in the banks where this sort of business is being done. Opportunities for service abound on every side. We know where it is needed, — right at our very doors. Money is one channel. How are we using it?

Gordon tells of a minister in a small town in America who received a letter asking for a special offering for a needy field in the West. With a good heart, he prepared a special sermon. Somehow it did not seem to get home. The banker down there on the left yawned a couple of times behind his hand. The merchant on the right examined his watch more than once. So with a little tinge of discouragement creeping into his spirit, he finished, and the church officials passed down the aisles for the collection.

The Girl With The Crutches

Meanwhile something unseen by human eyes was going on in the very last pew. Sitting there, alone, was a little girl of a poor family. She had met with a misfortune that had left her crippled. And her whole life seemed so dark and helpless. Some kind friends in the church, had made up a small fund and bought her a pair of crutches, and these had changed her whole life.

She had listened to the sermon, and her heart had been strangely warmed. As it finished she was thinking, "How I wish I could give something, but I haven't a copper." And a very small voice within seemed to say very softly but very distinctly, "There are your crutches." "Oh," she gasped to herself, "I can't give them, they are my life." So the little woman had her sight all unseen and unknown.

Final Dividend Not Yet Paid

The man with the plate came to the last pew. It seemed hardly worth while passing in the plate. Just little Maggio sitting there with her one foot dangling above the floor. But with fine courtesy he stopped and passed it in. Quietly she lifted her crutches and tried awkwardly to place them on the plate. Quick as a flash the man caught her thought, and walking up the aisle, carried the plate in one hand, and steadied the crutches with the other.

People began to look. Everyone knew the crutches. The banker blew his nose, and reached for his pencil, the merchant reached to stop the man. Somebody gave fifty dollars for the crutches and sent them back to the end pew. And the little girl, crippled only in body, hobbled out of that church, the happiest little woman in the world.

Her gift, small in itself, but touched with sacrifice, had become worth several hundred dollars in its earning power. And the original investment had been returned. The story has been told many times, and the final dividend has not yet been paid. The point is His service; we will find, by and that she recognised and obeyed by, that we have kept, for we have that inner voice. And that is the sent it ahead in a changed form, one law of giving as of all life.

Is YOUR child like this?

If your child suddenly loses interest in a subject she has always been keen about remember that she is growing rapidly—shedding up and over-acting her strength—using up more energy than she can really spare.

Horlick's at bedtime or mid-morning will replace this lost energy and provide the natural elements necessary for growth—children love the taste of Horlick's, either Plain or Chocolate Flavored, and it keeps them lively and vigorous. Horlick's is economical too—the milk is already in it—add water only.

BABIES

EVERY now and then the world gets tired of discussing Money and Armaments and Test Matches, and turns its attention to something that really matters, — such as the Baby. The arrival of a baby in a household makes more difference than any change of Government, but it is only occasionally that Governments give a thought to the subject of making that arrival easy and happy. And it is very doubtful whether such action as they take does any good. The Fascist Grand Council, for example, has created a "central organisation for the control of the Government's birth-rate policy," and that policy is to include employment for fathers of large families, with incomes proportionate to the family burden, marriage loans, and endowment for young workers. No visitor to Italy would guess that there was any shortage of babies. In fact, the new measures are needed because the system of bonuses to parents has failed to reduce the fall in the birth rate.

The obligation to conquer Abyssinia and restore the old Roman Empire was justified by the necessity for an outlet for overcrowded cities like Naples, and now the "beget more babies" policy is justified by the truism that "without life there would be no youth, military power, economic expansion, or secure future for the Fatherland." Russia has altered her marriage laws because the free love system failed to produce a sufficient crop of babies; Germany gives grants to young married people in the way of loans without interest that are said to be very beneficial, and the adoption of the same system in England is being advocated.

The most acute remark made by Miss Picton-Turberville in her minority report on the Mui Tsai is that the philanthropy of those who receive adopted daughters may be doubted in face of the fact that their motive is not strong enough to make them adopt children at the troublesome stage of babyhood. Only the instinct of parenthood is strong enough for that. And then there are the long years of anxious oversight while the child is growing to manhood or womanhood, amply rewarded by the hope of the comradeship that will come with maturity, and the feeling that the child is really in some sort a continuation of the life of the father and mother.

Is there any other motive that can replace that fundamental instinct? Is nationalism really strong enough to supplant it with the prospect that the son will either live to take the father's place when he is gone, or represent him in the ranks? It is no coincidence that it is in the countries that are urging parents to have more children than they would otherwise be ready to provide for, that the military ideal is being taught in the schools and colleges under Government encouragement. There is no concealment about it. The children are wanted in ever greater numbers to make ever greater armies. When Napoleon was advised of the terrible casualties of Austerlitz, he merely remarked that one night of Paris would make good the deficit. Were the mothers of the hostile army consoled with the same thought?

National Governments, under contemporary conditions, have to undertake a good many things that used to be left to the individual citizen, and the question that has divided Spain, and divides most other countries in a less degree, is simply where the line is to be drawn. "Capitalism" is coming to mean, not a particular way of managing money, but the attitude that no matter where the line be drawn, the governing principle must be that the State exists for the well being of the citizen, and must not interfere with his control of his own life and fate more than is necessary for those purposes which an individual cannot achieve for himself. If that involves a limitation of military power and economic expansion, then so be it. The fanciful statistics that are quoted to prove that our own race will decrease at the rate of twenty five per cent. in each generation until we shall be extinct in a couple of centuries leave out all the relevant considerations. Sir William Beveridge, of the London School of Economics, is nearer the mark when he says that what is wanted is larger houses, less crowding into cities, and relief from the financial strain that makes many provident young people only too cautious.

Released on Monday, the report of the Mui Tsai Commission was heralded at once, and with justification, as the most comprehensive survey and analysis of a thorny problem ever attempted. Much historical skill and constructive thought went into its compilation. The result, a majority report, recommending, except for slight stimulation of activity by a larger inspectorate, no change in existing policy, and a minority of one, Miss Picton-Turberville, revealing disquietude, was probably inevitable.

Collision occurred on the issue of extending the principle of registration to all female children under twelve years of age who, for any reason, have ceased to live with their parents or near relations. Miss Picton-Turberville sees the very real danger of the perpetuation of the mui tsai system under a different form. Sir Wilfrid Woods and Mr. Willis were more impressed, apparently, with the practical difficulties of and the political objections to a further and broader measure of protective legislation, forgetting, as Miss Picton-Turberville points out, that precisely similar consideration caused unnecessary delay in the adoption of the policy which has now their complete endorsement.

Chief obstacle to abolition of the mui tsai system lies in the difficulty of disentangling it from the all too common practice of transference of girl children in various forms. No-one any longer believes that efflux of time will furnish the cure. There is the crux of the problem. Miss Turberville, on the basis of the Maxwell scheme, has endeavoured to meet it and the majority report signatories to circumnavigate it.

Publication of the Army, Naval and Air Estimates provided some measure of the magnitude of Britain's re-armament effort during 1937. Army figures are up by some £7,000,000, the naval estimates by over twenty-three millions and the demands of the Air Force require additional expenditure to the tune of roughly £38,000,000. It is obvious, too, that these figures conceal more than they reveal. Items previously charged to the accounts of the services will be shown reflected in tremendously swollen ordnance costs. New factories for munition making and aircraft construction are to be built from public funds. If there is any further doubt that the Government are thoroughly committed to a breakneck pace, Mr. Winston Churchill has permitted himself to go on public record as, more or less, satisfied.

The urgent need for it all was revealed in the debate on foreign affairs. No clear line of policy was disclosed, beyond a re-assertion of a pathetic trust in collective security under League auspices, and a more candid confession that Britain's relations with France amount, virtually, to a military alliance. Mr. Grenfell, discussing the mission of the Foreign Office, pointed the root evil of to-day when he declared diplomacy to be demoralised. Pious hope there is plenty, but for all practical purposes, Mr. Eden's statement was a confession of failure.

Lord Halifax was no more helpful. He was not, he said, oblivious to the danger of a clash in Eastern Europe, involving, as it would France, but Britain's position could not be defined until the crisis developed and permitted the Government to adjudicate upon the circumstances. Pugnacious pacifists find this attitude just as puzzling as do the jingoists. It sounds strangely familiar, like an echo of 1914.

Spain has witnessed a sharp change in the tide of battle. At Oviedo, Toledo and Talavera, the rebels have been hurled back, badly shaken, coincidentally with the assumption of supreme control on the Madrid front by General Mañila. In a week, hard-won rebel successes of months have been wiped out. Government sources are the authority, but the silence of the rebels can only mean that they have nothing to say. More disturbing, from any point of view, is Valencia's news that Caballero has demanded and been granted plenipotentiary powers; in other words, dictatorship.

Hong Kong joins in the general madness by campaigns for making us air-raised-conscious and gas-minded. Dr. Dovey's exhibits at the Post Office were highly interesting and instructive, while his personal explanations of the precautions that can be taken to minimise the perils of gas warfare were almost reassuring. That said, and accepting, in some measure, the wisdom of preknowledge, the campaign nevertheless retains its link with the general madness. The cumulative effect of these stresses on the need for preparedness, cries for war-babies, the insanity of the race in arms, in the midst of repeated declarations by responsible statesmen that they do not believe war is imminent, is to spread the war-fever like nothing known before the Great War possibly could.

And when the catastrophic sequel does come, nobody and everybody will be surprised.

No little significance attaches to Japan's open disclosure of her interest in Dutch New Guinea. Kito-flying in Tokyo took the form of an indirect offer of a lease of the territory, coupled with the signature of a non-aggression pact. The Netherlands, in equally unofficial fashion, let it be known that her interest in either proposal was negligible. Holland's preservation of her delightfully phlegmatic calm, shown in this as in her few words with Germany on the neutrality question, is noteworthy in this neurosis-stricken age.

SCRUTATOR.

THE PASSING HOUR

By
A. N. M.

THE English Association has not often had a more delightful paper to listen to than the Hon. Mr. N. L. Smith's on "George Meredith's Heroines" last Tuesday. It was all the more, rather than less, timely in that the novelist is at present going through that period of neglect which comes to almost every writer when his own generation has passed away and his novels or poems have not yet acquired the interest of a costume drama. In this particular case there is a special reason for the waning of what was once a great popularity, though confined to the limited class that likes to read novels for the ideas it can get out of them, — and it involves a special element of injustice, for it arises from the success and not the failure of the writer.

Victorianism

AS Mr. Smith pointed out Meredith's life was practically contemporaneous with the Victorian era, and in him, with his candour and clear sight and contempt for popularity we should find, if anywhere, a justification of Lytton Strachey's pungent indictment of that successful and rather complacent age. What we do find is something quite the reverse, for it is the surprising fact that the Georgian critics can find in Victorian authors an anticipation of all their strictures. And it was the prophets of protest that were accepted as the leaders. George Meredith's particular heresy is sometimes called feminism, but very inaccurately, for he belonged to an earlier generation than the suffragists, and would probably not have been much interested in them. He did something much more important than the advocacy of a political programme. He persuaded a very masculine society that women really had brains and ought to be taken seriously.

Jane Austen

A reader of Fielding and Smollett and similar recorders of masculine adventures will find heroines credited with charm and sometimes with constancy, but we only know Sophia Western through the eyes of Tom Jones. As in life, so in novels, it was necessary that there should be a woman as a cause for the hero's exploits and misfortunes, but the novelist was little concerned with how the hero appeared to her except when his own fate was concerned. Jane Austen and some lesser lights,—for the novel was the natural outlet for suppressed feminine genius,—proved that there was not actually any such unfair division of faculties, but with all her genius the immortal Jane always kept some knitting beside her to put over her manuscript if she was surprised by visitors. It was not quite the thing for a woman to write even if she could write better than any man of her day. She could see through the masculine follies with an insight that the lords of creation did not reciprocate, but it was the man that had control of events. His Excellency the Governor told us that he reads Jane through every two years, but he does not confer the same honour on any of her male contemporaries.

The Egoists

That was the tone of society which Meredith as a young man found still universal in the society which he observed from the outside, with cool detachment. It struck him as absurd that only men's ideas should be considered worthy of observation and record. The masculinity of man was the real inspiration of his Sir Willoughby Patterne, and the arrogance of the male was delicately satirised by the juxtaposition of women, and one in particular, that we feel instinctively would be rather conferring than accepting an honour by accepting his hand in wedlock. The extraordinary success of the book was that Meredith actually got through the pachydermatous egotism and made the men of his day who mingled in society recognise the truth of the satire. To maintain the old air of patronage became proof of a lack of humour, and no man likes to be laughed at. Meredith's apparent subject was woman, but the target that his arrows of satire pierced was man.

The Later Victorians

THE generation that lived through the later half of the era saw the beginnings of many startling innovations, such as the foundation of the Women's Colleges, and the gradual admission of women to occupations that provided a livelihood without the sacrifice of social recognition. The novelist was not an active patron of any of these particular developments, but as time went on the women whom he had imagined became rather types than freaks. Clara Middletons and Diana Warwick could be met in ordinary life, and the originality of the original portrayals grew less startling and obvious. He might have anticipated Whistler's famous remark when congratulated on catching a fine record of a fleeting moment of scenery, "Yes, Nature's creeping up."

The Neo-Georgians

THE current critics, who scarcely hold Meredith worthy of mention, would be justified if the current girl were always of the Meredithian calibre—though even then they might have something to learn from him. Are they so sure that the masculine attitude to women nowadays has retained the respect of Sir Willoughby without his rather condescending stoop? Perhaps a new writer with Meredith's comic genius may arise to hold a mirror up to the Georgians with equally disconcerting effect.

OLD RITES MARK PAPUAN BETROTHALS

In a recent report on native customs, Sir Hubert Murray, Lieutenant Governor of Papua, or British New Guinea, lying north of Australia, asserted that some Papuan girls accept marriage only when suitors accompany offers with the fingers of defeated warriors.

The tradition of giving fingers and hands as gifts while courting is confined to a few small vanishing tribes in the partly explored districts of head-hunters. Many head hunters present skulls of murdered enemies.

Women do the proposing in most Papuan communities. At Mawatta the smitten maid sends word to her quarry that she would like him to call on her, presenting the head as a token of bravery. Instead of proposing verbally, the girl offers food to the warrior which he refuses.

The next day he ascertains whether the girl's family and the village chiefs approve of the match. If so, he calls and again refuses the girl's food but negotiates with her parents. Four pounds sterling is considered a fair price for a wife if the suitor has no sisters to give the bride's family in exchange for the bride. When all has been agreed upon, the suitor makes a final call and eats the food offered by the girl. The act of eating binds the couple in marriage.

In the delta country between Kiko and Mount Murray relatives of the girl throw spears and rocks at the relatives of her suitor "because the girl is so much better than the man."

The violence of the battle depends upon how much the man has offered to pay for the girl. If his price is low, the battle is long and grim. If his price is high, the battle becomes a mere sham, staged in deference to tradition.

Dramatic Proposal.

In the Southeastern coastal region of Papua (from Malay "puapua" or "frizzle-haired") the man proposes in the presence of the girl and her family. The girl bursts at once into weeping which grows louder as the would-be husband discusses terms with the girl's relatives. He may offer a snake first and then a bird and a quantity of food. The relatives reject the offerings one by one until the man breaks down and offers a live pig. At this, the girl ceases to weep and runs as fast as she can to the ladder beneath the man's house. When she climbs the ladder the couple are legally wed.

Divorces are rare in Papua, although any small fault constitutes adequate grounds.

One of the strongest of Papuan marriage taboos concerns the relations between married couples and mothers-in-law. It is forbidden for mothers to speak to the spouses of their children. A few tribes do not even permit mothers to mention the names of their in-laws in ordinary conversation.

Mainly about WOMEN

Something For The Neurotics:

ELLEN was quiet, sensible, steady, sweet, patient, earnest — Ellen was the whole category of substantial virtues rolled into one. She was pretty and entertaining. In brief, she was "what every man needs in the way of a wife." She loved a man named John — and John knew it.

Betty was gay, changeable as the weather, moody, gloomy, hilarious. She wasn't as pretty as Ellen, either. A man named John loved her, but whether she loved him or not was something he was trying to find out.

And it was the same John, by the way. Eventually John became engaged to Betty. Even on their wedding day he wasn't sure that she would meet him at the altar.

John and Betty lived happily and laughed often, ever after.

Ellen taught the fifth grade of the public school until the principal, whose orderly heart shared Ellen's love of routine, persuaded her that she was the wife for him. She was, too. She and the principal were normal human beings. John and Betty were "neurotics." And that, to end the story, would appear why John and Betty had far and away the more fun out of life!

Being a sensible, normal person may be the reason that the man you want wisely turns to a more frivolous woman — seemingly — and leaves you to type business letters for a living.

Dr. Louis E. Bisch, one of the foremost psychiatrists of America, author of the new book, "Be Glad You're Neurotic," has come to the defence of neurotics. They make the best wives, he says. They get more love and roses and sympathy from their husbands, too.

"A neurotic is one who has emotional conflicts which he or she may not realise," Dr. Bisch says. "A neurotic, in short, is not a 'vegetable' who merely breathes, eats, sleeps and goes through the motions of living. Rather, he or she is a living, dynamic, palpitating individual with more energy than the average."

To those who have believed that anybody should be pitied who married a neurotic woman, some valuable advice is given by Dr. Bisch. "The neurotic man and women are the most interesting because of that fact that they don't always exercise intellectual control of their emotions," he states. "They are impulsive, warm-blooded, excitable and unstable. But such actions add variety to their personality so you can never be sure how a neurotic will react under a given condition."

"It might seem that married life under such circumstances would create dissension and incompatibility. This is far out-balanced by the fact that neurotics avoid the greatest bane of married life, the one that brings the largest number of marriages on the rocks, namely, a routine existence where the husband and wife take each other for granted.

"A woman should always strive to keep alive her husband's instinct for conquest. . . ."

"Neurotics all have inherent ability far greater than the average person. They do the great things of the world. Theodore Roosevelt was a delicate boy. Paderewski had weak fingers but he became one of the greatest pianists. . . ."

Sometimes a normal woman marries a neurotic man. That is much more uncomfortable and sometimes more tragic than when it is the wife who is neurotic. In the later case she is forgiven and pampered. But suppose, if you are a normal woman, you have a neurotic husband, you are likely to think that he is "ineffectual and has no punch."

Some uncertainty seems to exist here as to what to back in the next race. ("Herald" photo).

"You are likely to be the kind of woman who prefers a weekly pay envelope, small though it is, to the risk of future wealth."

So, if you aren't willing to sacrifice, listen, and hope — and wait — then you aren't the wife for the bright boy with vision. Better give your heart to someone who does not look beyond the money for the winter coal. If two people are normal that's where they should look. If they are neurotic they'll think what a pretty blaze sea-wood makes — when they can afford it.

TAKE ALONG THE LITTLE PAL

There is a Time When Every Little Woman Should Have the Sense to Stay at Home

UNDER the general heading of Little Pals come those women newly married, as a rule who can hike as far as any man, shoot ducks with the best of them, carry a full pack over the portages, whip a stream with an iron wrist, and for whom the lash of storm, cold of winter, heat and flies of summer, hardships of the wilderness, hold no terrors; little rays of sunshine in any man's life, that is to say, of any man's party. Little Pals, in fact, get into my hair. My hair is full of Little Pals. They have been put there by Big Pals, those self-assured grooms who think they have married, not a wife for their own private use, but a Pal for mankind.

Big Pal's wedding present to his squaw-woman consists of a fly rod, a set of golf clubs, some hiking boots, a neat toy shotgun, a shooting jacket, some hip boots, a pair of skis and a sack of poker chips.

"But of course," says Big Pal when his companions indicate that the old crowd will try to get along without him, "my Little Pal will go right along with us. She's just one of the gang, from now on. You fellows don't know that girl. She's an outdoor man, if you know what I mean."

(We know exactly what you mean. You mean we've got to take turns carrying her.)

"She can stand right up to me any old day, doing anything. She'll take her turn just like the

He plays it.) "She can do all the cooking. All we have to do is loaf around: shooting, fishing, any old thing we want to. When meal time comes all we have to do is listen for the old dinner bell."

(With our hearts in our mouths.)

But you can't down Big Pal. Having played his ace, he tosses in the joker. He draws himself slightly up: "Well, anyway, she's good enough for me. Where I go, she goes. The way I figure it, any place a man goes, he shouldn't be afraid to take his wife."

Now this is subject to so many wise cracks we won't put any in italics. Make up your own. Go easy. After all, Big Pal has been through hell and highwater with you. He's regular. This temporary illness of his won't last. Let him bring along the little dumpling. Some of the boys may object they may think good God what are we up against now, anything, she clicks three or four balls over the fence at the right of the first tee, and does Big Pal rise to the occasion and laugh it off. "Why, darling, you that isn't like you, not a bit like you, you usually straighten them out a couple hundred yards or more darling. gosh, darling, you better look out the fellows here'll get to thinking you don't play a very good game, darling." (S-!!-P&!! Darling!)

Down at the shooting lodge our friend Oscar loudly proclaims Little Pal's determination to relieve everybody at the kitchen drudgery. What a comfort she turns out to be: scotching around rest of us you fellows won't have to give her anything. You won't have to worry about her. For example, she never gets tired.

"She's a he-man, that girl. She don't care what happens. The more it rains the better she likes it. And she sleeps right smack on the bare ground."

(Of course she does, Oscar. We're lugged enough spruce boughs for Little Pals-Who-Sleep-On-The-Ground to float the Queen Mary. We ought to know.)

"Say, she loves the old outdoor life. Shoot? She'll knock mammals that you and I'll miss."

"Another thing, she can paddle a canoe like an Indian—I often call her 'Squaw'—and she can pitch a tent, make a fire, and hit the trail like a veteran. She's a born woodsman. She knows what it's all about. You can't lose that girl in the woods. I've tried it, and I know."

(You didn't try hard enough, maybe.)

"You ought to see her fish. Boy! She can lay that fly on a dime. She's a better little old fisherman than I am, any day. Her fishing's like her golf game: hits from the men's tees. None of that washwoman swing. She clicks 'em, that girl. On the stream it's the same way. Just let her whip that stream beside you for one day, and you'll know what I mean. When evening comes you'll know that you been up against something."

"Another thing you fellows don't want to forget. The cooking." (This is Big Pal's ace.

but Big Pal can count on me for one. You might as well plunge in, Oscar, all of us might as well plunge in. Little Pal included, and have done. It won't last. One bright day you'll show up alone, as of yore. It seems that Little Pal—just for this once—has to stay home to put up some preserves, something she couldn't let go, and so on. That's all. That's all. (Maybe you ought to hurry home, Oscar.)

As for me, I've waded through many a Little Pal in my day. I've seen them come and I've seen them go. The little he-man comes out for the first outing all dilled up in her new pants. She's one of the crowd: you can tell by the way she puts her hands in her new pockets and whistles through her new lips. Go ahead, fellows, swear if you want to, I'm just one of the gang, God damn it.

She wields her fly rod with a magnificent, careless flourish, and Big Pal climbs out on a limb to untangle the fly with many a robust joke on his lips, lips that heretofore registered nothing but contempt for any fly-banger. "Hell," says he, his eyes in a mute plea to the rest of us, "you ought to be ashamed of yourself, Squaw, getting four fly up in a tree like this, the very first thing." He chuckles, shakes his head. "Old timer like you! Getting your fly up in a tree! Good joke on you, Mate; good joke on you. Ha, ha, ha!"

(Ha, ha, ha! Good joke on you, Mate, ha, ha, ha!)

And on the golf course, where, so Oscar has assured us, you don't have to give her any hand-icaps, you don't have to give her under everybody's feet and managing to monopolize the space around the door to the gent's toilet just at a time when some old wool underwear is the best you can scrape up in the way of a company negligee. In the kitchen she's a dream. She can't find things, she isn't used to this kind of stove, how can she be expected to make coffee in this old tin thing, and in the end she is down with a headache and Big Pal is assuring us all that he never saw her this way before, usually she's the life of the party, like the time down in Florida . . .

On a camping trip Little Pal is virtually indispensable. She takes things so easy! What does she care? Oh, hell, she left her manicure set back at the last camp site! Big Pal laughingly lets us draw straws to see who has the honour of going back after it. Hell of a swell joke!

Little Pal turns out to be a great he-man, but as her hands get blistered and she gives up paddling just for to-day (and the discovery is made that her idea of cooking is to open a jar of potato salad), Big Pal swings into lusty action and thrashes to the rescue: "Bill," he calls her, and "Old Man," and "Partner," and "Squaw," in a desperate effort to lift her up by his own boot straps into full membership in the gang. "It's your turn to get water, Bill," he says heartily. "No favourites in the Big Woods, you know."

He slaps a paddle into her hands with great gusto. "Dig into the water there, Squaw woman. We're on the old trail you know, where every man does his day's work or goes hungry." In the morning he asks her, "Well, how's the old partner to-day?" and slaps her on the back so hard it splits her shoes. This keeps up until Little Pal, trying her best to fall into the spirit of Nature, takes a sun bath and gets so nicely sun-burned she can't even sit on a canoe seat, and she's finally given up, even by the Old Man, and tossed into the hold and carried across the portages with the rest of the baggage.

In my long experience with Little Pals I have discovered three distinct groupings of the species. The first group, has been reading advice columns in the ladies' magazines and is now holding the Master's love by taking an interest in his work, his hobbies, everything he does. She has set out on a serious career as a True Helpmeet, and in every possible way makes a damned bother of herself.

The next group of Pals are those who have no idea of staying home and wondering if her male really went out fishing this week-end, or whether, as she suspects, he started toward the lake and as soon as he was out of sight veered well around to the left. She's going to be on hand, is this little gem.

Most numerous of them all are those who have been dragged in by the hair. They have run afoul of the big, tweedy outdoor male who has no intention of merging his big brown October life with that of any woman, but who has married to add another convert to his ideas. The things he likes are the Only Things in Life.

This last Little Pal puts on her pants like a good little girl, and she pretends to enjoy baiting her own hook, but usually she has private plans of her own, once the excitement is over.

I remember one member of a group I used to go hunting with who brought out his Squaw Woman with a broader flourish than most. Just a little Danny Boone, he called her—and as for her, she seconded the motion with a cheer. There's nothing, says she, like the great outdoors; she loved it. Why, she even liked to be bitten by mosquitoes; she thought it was fun, really.

But one of the boys made a horrible mistake. We were duck shooting, and the day was cold and raw. Nothing goes better on such a day than a touch of spirits—in this case, gin. In a burst of generosity he gave a drink to Little Pal. She seemed to take her dose with a distinctly professional air. She wanted more.

By the time she felt she'd had enough to ward off the chills, she was looking around with queer little jerks of her head. During one of these she focused on her Big Pal. She wanted to know who the hell he thought he was, and all she wanted was a nice warm room and a thick steak and a flock of cocktails and she wanted to get into her lace panties and go out dancing. And he could take his damned old ducks and his dirty grub and he knew what he could God damn well do with them, and she didn't want any more pioneering in her life, her ancestors had taken care of that for her, and please take her home. And the same went for fishing. She could buy all the fish she ever wanted, with tartar sauce on the side, long before she met him, and besides her boots made her feet hurt and look at her nails, and from now on, in her life, a tent was something a circus came in.

Then off came the boots to whistle past Big Pal's startled ears, and she gave a fine old Bronx cheer and started, bravely but with lack of finesse, up the road toward the railroad station, followed by the cheers of all except Big Pal, who ran after her cry, "Wait a minute, dear, you're not yourself, dear!" The last we saw of them he was carrying her and she was kicking her legs. He was trying to carry her toward the lodge, but she was kicking toward the railroad station, and we all knew that we had lost another Little Pal, and the world had lost another he-man camper, another Partner, another Bill, another Old Man, another Squaw, another hiker with the best of us, shooter beside any man, caster of flies on any stream, and nuisance in anybody's language.

SECURITY

Man, ever mindful of his responsibilities, seldom neglects to make provision for his future security. Whilst savings have a habit of never growing as fast as they might, a "Sun Life of Canada" policy never dwindles, but day by day, ensures that security so necessary for future well being.

PROTECTION

A "Sun Life of Canada" Policy gives two-fold protection. It creates an estate for the future and provides a source of income for your dependants should early death claim you. For your peace of mind, make this decision now.

INVESTMENT

When other investments become erratic in their returns, your "Sun Life of Canada" policy is a "gilt-edged" investment. Low premiums providing good annual bonuses with maximum benefits combine to make a "Sun Life of Canada" policy the only real unchangeable security.

THE interest of Dr. Dovey's address to the Rotary Club last Tuesday was engrossing, as might be expected. But the most interesting thing about it was that it should be so timely. It is only a year or two that the British Alliance with Japan, which freed her from all danger of being robbed of the fruits of her war with Russia by a combination of the Powers, as she had been robbed of Port Arthur after her war with China by Russia, France, and Germany, was merged into the Five Power Treaty of Washington, and neither before that nor since has Great Britain had any dispute with Japan, with the one exception that an Englishman, Lord Lytton, was Chairman of the League Commission to enquire into the occupation of Manchuria. A perusal of that report leaves the impression of an unprejudiced statement of facts, and a very moderate set of recommendations based on considerations of the substance rather than of the shadow. The offence was merely that the appointment of the Commission was a recognition that the other maritime Powers had an interest in Asia, and the wave of Nationalism that has swept Japan from her old moorings is inspired by the belief that Asia is an appanage of Japan, and that any interference by a European Power, or any assertion of independence by an Oriental Nation is an insult.

Are Precautions Panicky?

No wonder that many people say that it is a mere neurotic aberration to take the chances of war so seriously. The same thing is said of the speeches made before thousands of enthusiastic supporters by the German Fuehrer, with whom Japan has recently made some sort of agreement, the meaning of which does not lie on the surface. We are told to sit tight and wait for the hot air to evaporate. The answer is that the weapons of modern war take some years to make, and at least as long for their skilled use to be learned. We are still suffering from the effects of leaving preparation to be expedient after war has been begun. And the policy of sitting tight was very thoroughly tried out thirty years ago, and even more recently when what was called "unilateral disarmament" was the fashionable policy. Nobody can blame us if we conclude that powerful weapons are created with the intention that they shall some day be used, and that fiery speeches ignite a conflagration that gets out of control. That is not to say that any return to cooler calculations would not be very welcome, and at once reciprocated. It is merely a statement that the value of professions of friendships is assessed by the votes authorised for offensive armaments.

Can Defence Be Effective?

If protective measures were based on defeating poisonous gas after bombs had been dropped, there would be much misgiving as to the chance of preventing heavy casualties. There are always people who cannot realise danger, and others who soon get weary of precautions. It was years after safety lamps for mines had been invented before miners could be stopped from lighting their pipes with fatal results. There were always many in the course of a Zeppelin raid who took the maroons as a signal to go up on the roof or into the street to gaze at the Zeppelin. But that is no reason why every chance should not be given to the reasonable folk who take advice. And of course the passive prevention is far from being the only plan adopted. The new programme outlined by the "White Paper" presented to Parliament provides for 18 knot marine scouts armed for anti-aircraft work to be employed not only for the protection of convoys, but for the interception of raids. And these are only one of the new types of vessel for which plans have been prepared.

Offensive Defence

It took a world cataclysm to shake Governments,—and our own in particular,—out of the old fault of "preparing for the last war", but the lesson has been learned. It would not be too much to say that the devices of the last war are as outdated as chain armour was by gunpowder. Submarines can be located by sound-recorders that detect waves of sound under the surface of the waves, they can be reported by wireless, and they can be spotted by airplanes. All the history of warfare is a record of some new device being discovered that was decisive only when new, and soon after of the discovery of effective means of countering the danger. One reads of triumphs of research in the way of electric rays that will incapacitate the engines of airplanes, and there is nothing incredible about the scheme. One need not be so credulous as to take all that one reads as serious fact, but neither can one ignore the fact that delicate machinery is easily disturbed. The fatal thing is to be unprepared for the danger. So long as it is foreseen there is always a chance that the risks of attack may be too great to make it worth while.

Preventive Diplomacy

Much the best solution of course would be to avoid attack and the need for defence. The events of the day prove that it is all a matter of calculation, and that safety is to be sought in leading those who are planning an aggression to calculate that it would not be worth while. But for everyone to do that involves enormous expense, and it would be both cheaper and more effective to have "regional alliances", so that those who have common interests may agree to work together. But they would have to be very clear both on the amount of assistance to be provided and on the immediacy of action.

Parents of these children were grateful for the dry bins in this Memphis, Tennessee, flood shelter, in which their babies slept away the horrors of the flood that swept away their homes in the Mississippi Valley lowlands last month. The bins were set up to accommodate the hundreds of children flocking to Memphis until the flood subsided.

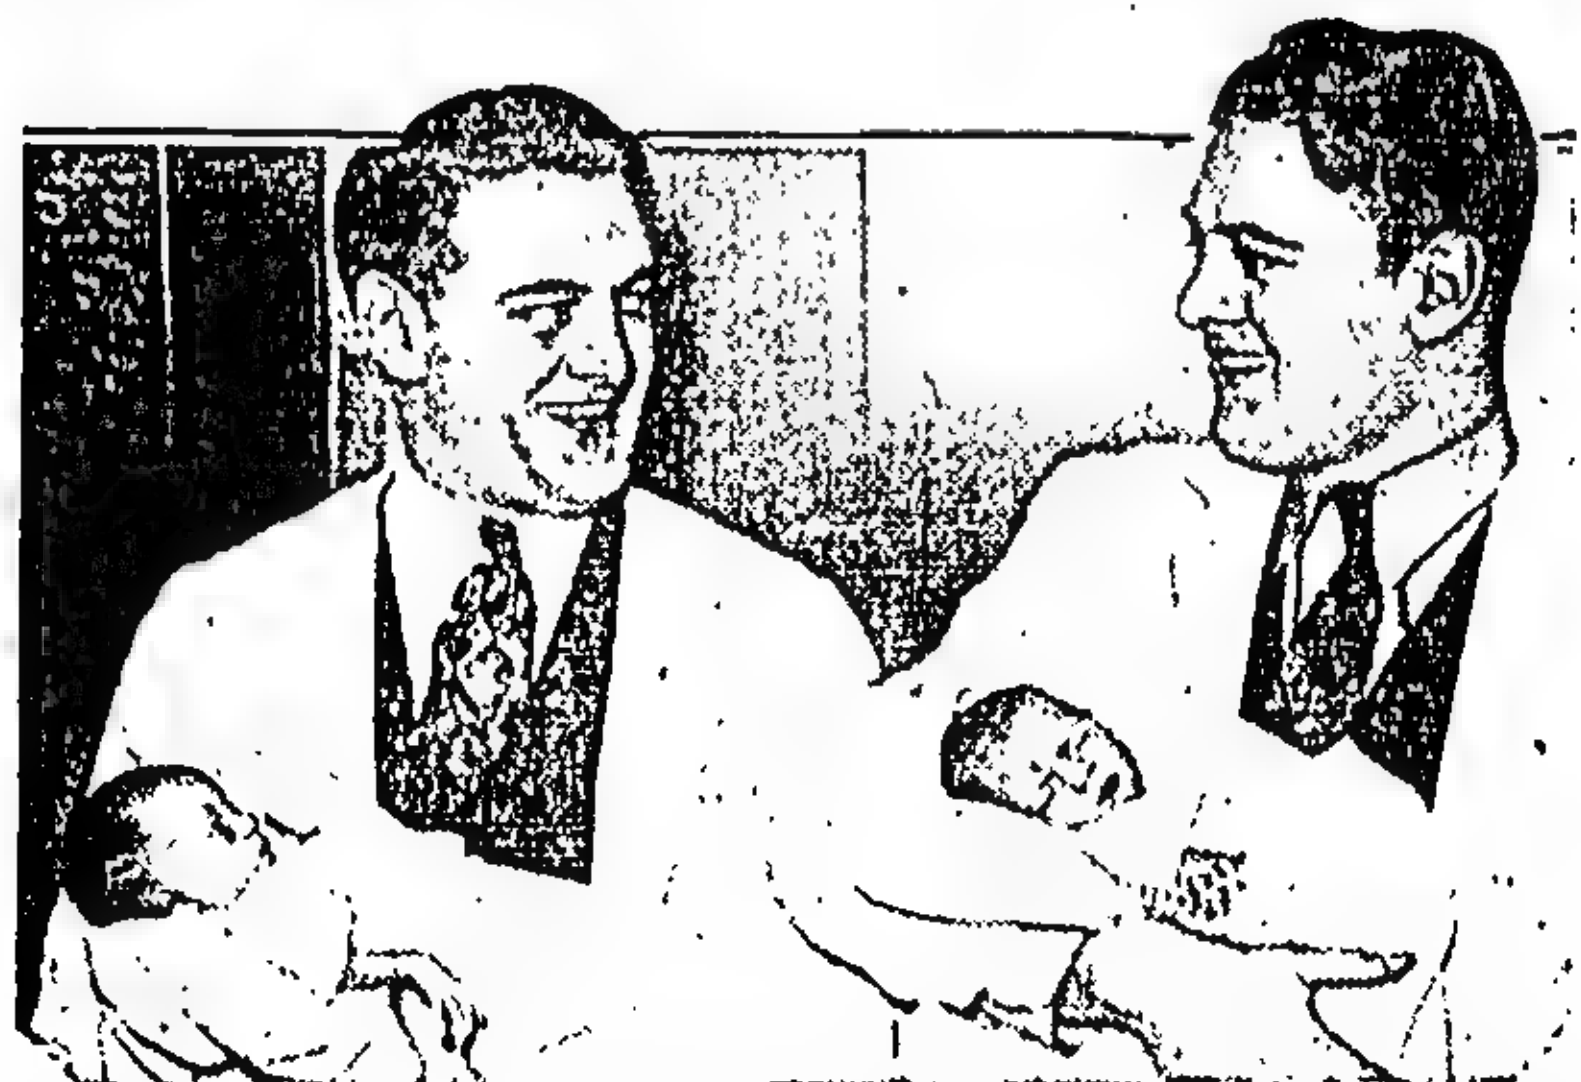

The American Red Cross took over the Fair Grounds at Memphis, Tennessee, last month, turning it into a combination hospital and sanitarium where sick victims of the flood were cared for, and where refugees were thoroughly examined to guard against the spread of disease. Here are some infants of the flood areas being bathed by nurses. They apparently don't care much for water.

This gown distinguishes itself by its extreme decollete and black jet hagle heads which give a shimmering effect whenever the wearer moves. Jenn Arthur, the screen star, attaches a huge circle of filmy black tulle to the beaded Juliet cap.

The handsome little man in the picture is Flood Willoughby, who was born in the shower-room of the Fourth District Police Station in Louisville, Kentucky. Dr. O. D. Hoffman, who officiated at the delivery, with a pair of scissors and a pan of boiling water as his only equipment, is shown above, as well as the mother, 30-year-old Mrs. Edna Willoughby, of Louisville. Her home had been inundated by the flood.

Just one of the oddities of life occurred when Drs. Ernest H. and David A. Latham (twins) collaborated in a delicate operation on Mrs. George A. Byam at a Lowell, Massachusetts, hospital and delivered twin babies. The twin doctors are shown holding the twins they brought into the world.

Sports Chatter

Humphreys Goes Home
E. HUMPHREYS, the P. Shanghai and Hong Kong Interport cricketer and Rugby player, left the Colony last Sunday for England. It is doubtful whether he will return to the Colony. He played in the Colony pack in the last Interport match against Shanghai.

Rugby Casualties
LIEUT. J. R. Davenport, R.A., one of the Army's best Rugby centre-threequarters, and L/Cpl. Harrison, one of their most outstanding forwards this season, are both on the injured list with damaged knees. It is feared that the latter has damaged the cartilage of his right knee.

Army Swimming
WITH the departure of the majority of the Royal Engineers' swimming team during the April trooping, it very much looks as if the Fusiliers, with Lieut. A. J. Lewis at their head, and the Rifles, led by Rfm. Hamilton, the Army 100 Yards champion, will vie for major honours. The Sappers will, however, have Lieut. R. A. Barron and Lieut. J. M. Calvert to form the nucleus of a new team.

Hole In One
C. G. Anderson, playing golf on the Kowloon course last Sunday, joined the select ranks of golfers who have holed out in one. He accomplished this feat at the "Blind" hole.

THE ladies of the Seaforth Highlanders are making a big effort to get hockey started. Mr. Williamson, the Padre of the Regiment is acting as coach.

Perry Leaves For Home
A. E. PERRY, the Civil Service vice cricket vice-captain, left the Colony on Home leave a short while ago.

Believes In Exercise
S. A. Gray, the K.C.C. tennis player, certainly believes in exercise. Last Monday he defeated S. Wong in the Colony Tennis Singles Championship, the match going to no less than 42 games. The same evening he gave a good display for St. Andrew's at badminton, and the following day he took part in an open mixed doubles badminton match.

Carr Due For Leave
T. W. Carr, the K.C.C. lawn bowler and a regular scorer for the cricket elevens, is due for leave in a few months.

Hockey Player To Wed
CONGRATULATIONS to Miss E. M. Xavier, the Recreation hockey player, on her forthcoming marriage to Mr. A. A. Remedios.

Wong Wing Returns South
WONG WING, the former South China "A" soccer goalkeeper, has returned to Canton from North China, where he had been undergoing military training, and although he will not take up soccer until next season, he will probably be seen as a water-polo player for the powerful Mak Ngah Association team which often pays a visit to the Colony.

Names Mixed
TO clear up an erroneous impression, I might state that the D. Anderson who was defeated by Joe Leonard in the first round of the tennis singles championship is not D. J. N. Anderson of the K.C.C., who has not entered for the singles event. He was seen in action in the doubles, however, in partnership with F. R. Zimmern. Incidentally, Leonard's partner in the doubles was not Robert Choa but George Choa, his younger brother. Robert is not taking any part in the tournaments.

Strong Portuguese Defence
PORTUGAL are likely to have a very powerful defence. With Souza in goal, Rodrigues and Gosano at back, and Oliveira, Gonsalves and Alves in the intermediate line, opposing forwards are going to have all their work cut out to score goals.

Coming Interporter?
IF George Souza, the youthful Craigenower cricketer, can maintain his present fine form with both the ball and the bat, he is going to be a strong contender for Interport honours when the Shanghai team visit us next November.

Yau's Fine Promise
YAU Wah-hing, who was recently promoted to the South China "B" team, gave a good soccer display in the pivotal position last week. He is not such a good tackler as Lim Tak-po, but his head-work and distribution are good.

Bowlers On Leave
AMONG other Civil Service Cricket Club lawn bowlers who will be on leave this season and who will be available for the Esplan Cup are H. F. Westlake Jr., and W. Burling.

Lance Still Available
CONTRARY to a previous report in these columns, H. G. Lange, the European Y.M.C.A. swimming captain, will not be leaving for Germany next month and so will again be available for the coming swimming season. He has expressed a hope, however, that some younger member of the section should fill his post on the Committee, for which he has rendered yeoman service.

The Royal Welch Fusiliers' "A" Seven-A-Side Rugby team, above, won the Army tournament by defeating the Royal Engineers in the Final Round a week ago last Friday on the Polo ground. ("Herald" photo).

Rodrigues Back To Hockey

DR. A. M. RODRIGUES, one of the finest all-round sportsmen in the Colony, has just resumed his hockey activities. He will represent Portugal in the International Hockey Tournament.

Police Win At Last

THE Police won their first League game of the season last week when they experimented with Gough and North in the forward line. Throughout the season the Police have come very near winning several games, but they lacked a centre-forward after Johnson gave up the game, and this has been their greatest fault in the forward line, as several players have been tried in this position, including Blackburn, Green, Morrison and Willerton.

Morrison Impresses

I was much impressed with the display of Morrison at inside-right against the Navy recently. He displayed good ball control and made numerous openings for the other forwards. If he concentrates on the game — he likes cricket too — he will soon develop into a first class player.

Athletic Favourites

THE Portuguese Company of the Volunteers are again favoured for the Athletic Championship this season. They will have the services of C. D'Almada e Castro, T. A. Alves and B. Gosano whose injured knee has completely recovered.

Baseball Prospects

THE local Baseball League will soon be starting and Mr. W. Muir and Mr. C. Thompson are busily engaged negotiating for a ground. This season the competition promises to be even keener as several other teams may be joining. Including a team from the Mayo Shoppe under the management of Mr. Porter.

Volunteers To Enter?

PROVIDING permission and necessary assistance are forthcoming, the Volunteers, who tied for second place last year, will again be entering this season, and, in view of the experience gained in their first year of entry, they should again do well. J. Bowen, D. Leonard, A. Hussain and V. Costa will all be available, while newcomers will probably be Hassan, from the Signal section, and Smedley, from the "A" section.

New Names?

WILLIAMS, the American Club star third baseman, is still very keen on the game, though he cannot find time to take part in the management of the League. He has suggested that for this season teams should take the names of clubs in the American League and thus do away with the present international aspect.

Wong Neglects Training

WONG IU-MAN, who came second to E. M. Marques in the Colony 100 yards breast-stroke swimming championship, has not been in training for the past five months and it is extremely doubtful whether he will offer a serious challenge to the holder next season.

Whitley Goes On Leave

NORMAN Whitley, the Civil Service cricketer and C.B.A. hockey player, left for England yesterday on leave.

Inspector Hunt Goes Home

INSPECTOR R. J. Hunt, who has trained the majority of life-savers in the Colony, and who was one of the Victoria Recreation Club's hardest worked members, left for England with Mrs. Hunt and family a week ago last Saturday. Miss Doris Hunt, his well-known daughter, who is a very fine swimmer and hockey player, has remained behind in the Colony.

Will Assist Volunteers

W. J. ROBERTS, Operations Manager of the Asiatic Petroleum Co., is a keen Volunteer and follower of baseball. He has promised to assist the Volunteer team while he is here.

Lammert In Swatow

E. L. LAMMERT, who formerly played on the right-wing for the Hong Kong Football Club junior soccer eleven, and who has also played for the Club "A" Rugby fifteen, left the Colony last Thursday for Swatow, where he will be stationed from now onwards.

PERRY AND BRITISH SPORT

THE magnanimous offer of Fred Perry to travel from Hollywood to Wimbledon and assist in coaching the Davis Cup team without payment has not been well received. Perry spoke of the debt he owed to tennis, which occasioned comment because so few are prepared to acknowledge their debts, and also brought forth the retort that if it had not been for tennis Perry would not have been famous. In other words, if it had not been for the fact that the Atlantic Ocean was full of water, the "Queen Mary" would not have won the Blue Riband of the Atlantic.

It is true that tennis gave Perry the opportunity of proving his worth, but what would tennis be without such men as Perry? Who would prove to be the drawing power at Wimbledon and other places if it were not for Perry and his kind. Perry turned professional. Is this a crime? He had been the drawing card that drew thousands of people to Wimbledon, Bournemouth and other tennis grounds. He had brought thousands of pounds into the exchequer of the Lawn Tennis Association. If Perry had an accident and broke his wrist beyond repair, what would he have done during the rest of his life?

He could have been one of those amateurs that the Americans speak of when they say that the only difference between an amateur and a professional is that the former does not accept cheques. Now after years of amateur work he has gone out for the money. The terms, amateur and professional, are as out of date as the bow and arrow as methods of warfare. They ought to go along with "gentlemen" and "player" to that realm of obscurity whence they should never have emerged. How can any man, who is without independent means, hope to achieve any measure of success in sport if he has not the opportunity to develop his prowess? Recently at the National Sporting Club a promising Northern welterweight had to cancel his boxing engagement because he had got a job after being eighteen months unemployed. If he had come to London to fulfil his engagement, he would have lost his job. And they talk of the dearth of champions!

Rumours to this effect have been spreading throughout the Balkans for some weeks.

The report, however, is denied in Berlin, where official quarters say it is entirely without foundation.—Trans-Ocean.

Mr. La Guardia, the Mayor of New York, who, in an extraordinary speech, referred to Herr Hitler as a 'brown-shirted fanatic' adding that an effigy would appear 'in a Chamber of Horrors which I myself will open.'

Valencia's Offer To Britain

London, Yesterday.

A statement issued to the Press by the Spanish Embassy in London, after reiterating the distinction drawn by the Valencia authorities between the "Volunteers" in their own and the insurgent armies, announced that the Spanish Government nevertheless definitely accepted the suggestion that all foreigners taking part in the present struggle, whether on the Government or the rebel side, should be withdrawn.

"This suggestion has been clearly alluded to by the Foreign Ministers both of the United Kingdom and France in their recent speeches in the Commons and the Senate."

The Government of the Republic adopts this plan and is ready to cooperate toward its execution once the necessary reciprocity is assured.—British Wireless.

Four Thousand Out At Derby: More May Follow

(SPECIAL TO THE "SUNDAY HERALD")

London, Yesterday.

Widespread strikes in munitions and aircraft manufacturing factories are visualised in the newspapers.

THE DEVELOPMENT, WHICH WOULD IMMOBILISE BRITAIN'S REARMAMENT PROGRAMME, LOOMS AS A RESULT OF THE STRIKE AT THE FAMOUS ROLLS-ROYCE WORKS AT DERBY.

Here 4,000 out of 5,000 workers have stopped work, and the works are at a complete standstill.

With the works showing no signs of giving in to the men's demands, repercussions are feared all over the country.

The newspapers report that workers in arms factories in Birmingham, Manchester, Sheffield, Coventry, Wolverhampton, Leicester and Nottingham, have announced that the Rolls-Royce employees may reckon on their support.

In addition, workers in several London aircraft manufacturing companies have threatened to declare a strike if the Rolls-Royce works refuse to grant the demands of their striking employees.

The strikers at Derby are mostly highly-skilled specialists and cannot be replaced.

This in itself is a serious matter, since Rolls-Royce engines are used extensively in the Royal Air Force.

If, however, munitions workers in other parts of the country strike in sympathy, the situation will become far more grave.—Trans-Ocean.

A man named Ho Kwong, was removed to the G.C.H. in a serious condition as the result of injuries received when he fell while on board the Cape St. Francis at Kennedy Town on Friday night.

Prague Ready For Raids

Prague, Yesterday.

Czecho-Slovakia is the latest European nation to institute active measures for defence of the civil population against air raids.

Yesterday it was announced by the Home Office that every man, woman and child in the country would be required to provide themselves with gas masks.

Delivery of the masks to the population will take place in three stages.

Industrial towns and frontier regions will be the first to be supplied with masks, persons without full means of support being given masks free of charge.

The city of Prague has already provided funds for building underground shelters, in which the population can take refuge in the event of air raids.—Trans-Ocean.

BLACKSMITHS FINED

Three blacksmiths, Chu Nam, Chu Po and Mok Tsai were yesterday fined $100, or two months' imprisonment, by Mr. W. Schofield at the Central Magistracy, on pleading guilty to trespass.

Mr. W. E. Hollands, of the Land office, was complainant, and Sub-Inspector Dreige said that as the result of complaints received from Mr. Walton, of Brick Hill, opposite Shouson Hill, a watch was kept for men digging for cables. These three were arrested. The excavations were fairly large and afforded breeding places for mosquitoes after a rain.

NAVAL PATROLS WILL COST A MILLION

LONDON, YESTERDAY.

FURTHER DETAILS OF THE NAVAL CONTROL PLAN, AS DECIDED UPON BY THE NON-INTERVENTION COMMITTEE, HAVE BEEN REVEALED.

Supervising officers have the right to examine identification papers of passengers and crew on ships which are stopped by the patrol.

They also have the right to supervise the discharge of cargo and, where they suspect contraband, to demand the opening of cases and bales.

War vessels on the patrol have the right to halt all ships belonging to the control Powers proceeding to Spain, and to examine the ship's papers.

NO RIGHT OF SEARCH

They have no right, however, to search ships.

Nevertheless, supervising officials are entitled to notify the captains of each such vessel that he would be violating the laws of his own country if, before reaching Spain, he did not submit to search.

In such cases war vessels will report to the Government in question, their own Government and the non-intervention committee.

COST OF PLAN

The total cost of supervision of this character is estimated at £900,000 for one year.

The Powers exercising control at sea will bear 16 per cent. of the costs, while the other 22 States will subscribe the rest.

Expenditure arising out of patrol activity of the separate fleets will be borne by the States in question themselves.—Trans-Ocean.

Observation on the Portuguese frontier will be organised outside the general scheme and the appointment of 130 British observers for this purpose has already been announced. The Franco-Spanish frontier will be watched by an international body also numbering 130, and five observers will exercise similar control along the short Gibraltar-Spanish frontier.

BY STAGES

As there are no relevant precedents for the control scheme, it will not be surprising if it proves necessary to inaugurate it by stages.

The first stage must obviously be the appointment of the higher directing officials and their personal staffs.

The French and British authorities have agreed that the observers along the frontiers shall enjoy the immunities normally accorded to diplomatic officers and they will have full facilities, including the right of free entry into dock and railway warehouses and depots, the right of inspection and of examining documents relating to particular consignments and travellers' passports.—British Wireless.

HALT AND GIVE THE COUNTERSIGN

Several words have been omitted in the following short paragraph and numbers have been supplied in their places. These numbers are determined by their position in a 10-letter word, the letters of which are numbered in order 1234567890. For example, if the word were DUMBWAITER (which it isn't), then D would be 1, U would be 2, etc. How fast can you supply the missing words and find the key word?

BUSINESS MEN DISCUSS
ECONOMIC OUTLOOKInternational Chamber Of Commerce
Hold Council In ParisIMPROVING WORLD'S STANDARD OF LIVING

Paris, Yesterday
The economic situation and market conditions in Latin America were the chief subjects discussed at the session of the Administrative Council of the International Chamber of Commerce here, yesterday.

Describing conditions in the Argentine, the British delegate, Baron Luke of Pavenham, pointed out that the Argentine Republic could easily provide food and accommodation for 50,000,000 people.

Baron Luke also expressed the conviction that the Argentine would be thoroughly capable of coping with its own financial requirements in future.

CURRENCY CONTROL
The Argentine delegate, Senor Jose Dodero, described foreign currency control and measures for restriction of agricultural production in the Argentine.

He declared that the policy pursued by the Argentine Ministry of Agriculture had as its aim the pushing of sales without waiting for an improvement in prices.

He stated the opinion that the moment was now opportune for establishing closer relations between South American countries and other nations, and expressed the hope that an attempt to found an Argentine section of the International Chamber of Commerce might be successful.

A member of the board of directors of the German Dye Trust, Dr. Max Illner, outlined the policy which a highly industrialized country should adopt to increase its exports to Latin America.

He pointed out that the constantly changing requirements of the South American market would have to be closely considered by industrial countries.

"Foreign business must be the ally, and not the exploiter," he stated.

AFRICAN RECOVERY
The French delegate, Mr. Desouches, gave an account of economic recovery in South Africa.

The presence of 150,000,000 under-nourished people on the African Continent, he said, is an even more important factor than Africa's wealth in raw materials, since on the basis of per capita consumption of twenty francs, an annual turn-over of 3,000,000,000 francs could be reached.

If the per capita consumption of the African native population increased to 500 francs, the annual turn-over would reach the enormous amount of 75,000,000,000 francs.

Experience in French Algeria, where the per capita consumption of 10,000,000 natives had been raised to 600 francs per year, showed that even the last quoted figure was by no means Utopian.

New Development In Gold Fields In Philippines

Opiso and Company, Inc., organized under the laws of the Philippines and authorized by the Securities and Exchange Commission to dispose of its stock to the public announces through its consulting engineer, Mr. J. S. Baker, that satisfactory results have come from the efforts of the company thus far. The organization has engaged several engineers in the Philippines, brought some men from the United States and expects to have several more arriving in the near future. Among them are:

A. P. Bowie, formerly with Marsman and Company, Inc. serving as assistant superintendent of Coco Grove, Inc.; Dean C. Albee, who has been with the General Exploration and Development Co. on their Mindanao properties; D. T. Hughes, diamond driller for the company.

Among new arrivals from the States are, J. McLaren Forbes, geologist, formerly with several of the copper companies in Arizona; George L. H. Loran, formerly consulting engineer, more recently in the Mother Lode section of California; Donald MacLaren, a graduate of the California Institute of Technology; Mr. MacLaren with two years experience in the Inspiration Copper Co. in Arizona and later geologist and engineer for the Eagle Picher Co. of Arizona, is expected to prove a valuable addition to the organization.

The activities of Opiso and Company, Inc. consist principally in the examination of prospects which have been offered for development. Through a process of elimination those which did not indicate any possibilities have been relinquished by the company.

In addition to this work, Opiso and Company, Inc. engineers have been retained by several companies to make detailed examinations of their properties and to consider negotiating contracts for the management of these companies by Opiso and Company, Inc.

After a period of examination of the properties of the Paracale Consolidated Venture an operating contract was concluded whereby Opiso and Company, Inc. will develop the properties. Thus far the results have been quite gratifying and assays ranging from $1.40 to $20.00 have been secured on the property with some as high as $263. Intensive development outlined at the present moment consists of the sinking of a working shaft and the driving of such drifts and cross-cuts as can be economically placed to give maximum results at a minimum expense.

In addition to this, one of the properties of the San Maurice-Luklukan Mining Co. has given encouraging results. Judge A. M. Opiso, well known attorney, is President of Opiso and Company, Inc. "Manila Bulletin" advertisement on Page 61.

CLUB AND INDIANS DRAW NEEDLE CRICKET LEAGUE MATCH

Owen Hughes Hit In Face By Return Drive

MINU HITS SIXES WHILE MADAR HOLDS END UP

PRICHARD UPSETS CRAIGENGOWER

JONES AND CLARKE TAKE PART IN THREE-FIGURE STAND

THE needle match between the Hong Kong Cricket Club and the Indian Recreation Club ended in a draw on the Club ground yesterday and as a result the premier League Championship is as open now as it was before. The Club suffered a severe blow early in the game when Harry Owen Hughes was struck on the face by a powerful return drive from A. H. Madar. He took no further part in the game. Despite this disadvantage — Owen Hughes is their best all-rounder — the Club were kept in the field until 4.29 p.m., when it was practically impossible to force a win.

The Indians will meet the K.C.C., the dethroned 1935-6 champions, next Saturday and need only draw to ensure a play-off against the Club, who must beat Craigengower next Saturday if they are to make a bid for the title.

A. R. Abbas, who scored 51 out of 90, including six boundaries, took part in a third wicket stand of 58 with A. H. Madar, who carried his bat for 49, scored out of 159 and including only four boundaries. Madar and A. R. Minu, who hit two sixes and eight boundaries in his 58, added 82 runs for the fourth wicket. Accurate bowling by Lt. Prichard (7 for 43) enabled the Army to record their first win in six matches, Craigengower being beaten by 2 wickets following a good knock by Capt. Michell, who hit a five and seven boundaries in his 55, scored out of 87.

THE UNIVERSITY WERE TIED UP IN KNOTS BY R. E. LEE AND B. D. LAY AND THE K.C.C. EASILY PASSED THEIR MEASURE TOTAL OF 64. N. A. E. MACKAY JUST FAILED TO SECURE HIS FIFTY FOR THE WINNERS, WHO TRIED A NEW BATTING ORDER.

Pte. Knowles (5 for 40) dismissed the Civil Servants for 85 and Cpl. Jones (56) and C. S. M. Clarke (78) took part in a three-figure stand for the sixth wicket to give the Army "C" victory by five wickets. Both batsmen retired, Jones hitting a five and six boundaries and Clarke 18 boundaries.

After totalling 215 for 6 the Army "B" were held to a draw by the Indians, for whom A. S. Sufiad scored 72, which included 12 boundaries, out of 118 for 8. Q. M. S. Moreton (32) and L. Cpl. Moore (73) added 81 runs for the military team's second wicket and Moore and Cpl. Hopperoff (77 not out) added 66 for the third wicket, Moore and Hopperoff both hit 14 boundaries.

Despite a captain's innings of 63 out of 98 by A. M. Prata, who hit 11 boundaries in his undefeated knock, Recreio were well beaten by the Club, for whom J. E. Potter (60) and I. S. Forbes (64) added 93 for the second wicket. Potter hit six boundaries and Forbes a six and 11 boundaries. The match did not start until 2.45 p.m. and Recreio scored very slowly, hence their early declaration.

A stand of 95 for the fifth wicket by Sgt. Bennett (46) and Q. M. S. Eaton (53) laid the foundation for Army "A's" win over Craigengower, S/Sgt. Collins taking 5 for 23 after being hit for a six by N. Broadbridge.

CLUB "A" RETAIN THE RUGBY SEVENS CHAMPIONSHIP

BIDWELL & GRIEVE IN GREAT FORM

FUSILIERS COLLAPSE IN FINAL

THE HONG KONG FOOTBALL CLUB "A" TEAM RETAINED THE BLARNEY STONE RUGBY SEVEN-A-SIDE SHIELD YESTERDAY AFTERNOON, WHEN THEY DEFEATED THE ROYAL WELSH FUSILIERS "A" BY FOUR GOALS AND A TRY (23 POINTS) TO TWO TRIES (6 POINTS) IN THE FINAL ROUND.

THE CLUB TEAM WERE MUCH TOO GOOD FOR THEIR OPPONENTS, BIDWELL AND GRIEVE AGAIN BEING IN THE LIMELIGHT WITH SOME SPLENDID OPENINGS.

Among the large gathering of spectators were His Excellency the Governor, Sir Andrew Caldecott, attended by his A.D.C., Capt. W. J. R. Cragg, the Commodore, Rear-Admiral C. G. Sedgwick, R.N. and Mrs. Sedgwick, Mr. V. M. Grayburn, Chairman of the Club, the Hon. Mr. S. H. Dodwell, Mrs. Dodwell and Miss Dodwell, and Col. and Mrs. H. C. Harrison.

Although the Club "A" showed signs of tiring in their semi-final round match against the Fusiliers "B", the 20 minutes interval between the last semi-final round encounter and the final revived them considerably. Bonnar was crooked in a preliminary round, but gave excellent service as scrum-half, sending his backs away with splendid passes, while van Leeuwen was very fast, although he should have scored on several more occasions.

Watken, Deane and Peers were in splendid fettle, Deane scoring the last try of the day against the Fusiliers "A", while both Peers and Watken were very good in the loose.

EASY PASSAGE
The Fusiliers, although they were given a much easier passage to the final, seemed very tired in the deciding clash and could achieve little except in the opening minutes of the second half, when they scored two quick tries, but they then faded out of the picture. Peers' service from the base of the scrum was not very good. Rice-Evans consequently having to take passes at all angles and heights. The latter, however, was not seen at his best and one or two of his passes might have produced better results had they been higher.

Floyd and Davies, the Fusiliers' most dangerous backs, were seen at their best in the quarter-final match against the Club "B", but they lacked confidence in their passing in the latter games. Floyd was tired against the Club "A". He had two opportunities of breaking through, but his late spurts on both occasions proved futile in the face of splendid defence work by Grieve and Bidwell.

A series of mistakes by the B. and S. backs and the frequent blowing of the whistle ruined what might have been an interesting match against the Fusiliers "B", the latter eventually winning.

The following were the results, round by round:

QUARTER-FINALS
Fusiliers "A" proved much too good for Club "B" and won by a goal and two tries (11 points) to nil, after leading at the interval by five clear points.

Floyd was the most dangerous of the Fusiliers' backs, scoring a fine opening try which he converted himself. In the second half Watkins dribbled over for the soldiers' second try and just before the end Floyd added their third, failing to convert both the latter. Henderson, Holden and Hynes were the pick of the losing team, performing great work in the loose.

The Royal Army Medical Corps surprised the Fusiliers "B" by a goal (5 points) scored in the first half of the game by Attos. The Medical Corps' forwards, led by Crawford, were always on top of their opponents and as a result the Fusiliers' movements were smothered at the outset. Waincote was very prominent among the Medical Corps forwards.

After persistent pressure in the latter stages of the opening half, Attos broke through for a good try near the posts which Waincote improved upon. There was no scoring in the second half.

B. AND S. ELIMINATED
The Fusiliers "B" eliminated Butterfield and Swires by two tries (6 points) to nil after a ding-dong struggle featured by dropped passes.

Hutchinson dropped a pass from Frost late in the first half and Begg gathered brilliantly on the run to score near the posts, but Kelshaw failed to add the points. In the second half Kelshaw broke through in a short run to score the Fusiliers' second try, again failing to majorise the effort.

CLUB "A" EXTENDED
Although the Club "A" entered the semi-final round, they had to go all out against Navy "B", winning eventually by three goals and a try (18 points) to a goal and a try (8 points), after leading by 18 points to 3 at the interval.

Navy "B" surprised the Club in the first minute of the game when Winn crossed the Civilian's line in the corner for an unconverted try, but soon after Grieve broke through to send Bidwell away for a 60-yard run to score between the posts for Grieve to add the goal points. A nice back movement saw van Leeuwen in possession and streaking for the line, but Beynam came across in splendid fashion to grass the Club threequarter. Bidwell was again on the wapath soon after and scored again, Beynam just failing to stop him with a dive, and just before the interval Grieve sent van Leeuwen over for a try which the former converted.

The opening minute of the second half saw Bidwell break through and send Peers over for a try which Grieve improved upon, but the Navy retaliated strongly in the closing minute and score their second try through Howarth, which Begg improved upon.

SEMI-FINAL ROUND
Fusiliers "A" entered the final round at the expense of the Royal Army Medical Corps after a strenuous game, despite the large difference in the scores, winning by two goals and three tries (19 points) to a try (3 points).

Floyd opened the scoring in the first minute when he punted ahead and raced Attos for the ball to the corner flag for an unconverted try. Soon afterwards Floyd broke through in characteristic style and added the goalpoints with a great kick from the touchline.

Just before the interval the Medicals pressed and, after a series of raids by forwards and backs, Waincote took the ball over the Fusiliers' line and fell on it for a try, adding the goal points himself.

In the second half the Fusiliers dominated the exchanges and further tries came from Davies, Rice-Evans and Barry, one of them being converted by Rice-Evans.

FUSILIERS RALLY
In the other semi-final round encounter, Club "A" defeated the Fusiliers "B" by three tries (9 points) to a try (3 points).

Lewis, Wilkins and Begg were the pick of the Fusiliers.

Grieve opened the scoring after a long run, but failed to add the goal points, and soon after van Leeuwen was given an opening which he did not fail to score from, Grieve again failing with the goal-kick. In the second half Peers completed the Club's tally with their third unconverted try and just before the end Wilkins beat the Club backs for the Fusiliers' only points.

During the 20 minutes interval between the above game and the final, a game of sack rugby was played between sides of nine, A. H. R. Butcher eventually scoring the only points by placing the ball in an empty barrel.

THE FINAL
The final, which was of 10 minutes duration in each half, provided a ding-dong struggle in the opening half, Bidwell narrowly failing to open the score with a drop-goal.

The Club exerted pressure and, following several good forward movements, Bonnar sent a reverse pass to Grieve for the latter to force his way over between the posts. Grieve added the goal points. Just before the interval, as a result of splendid backing up, Watken was sent over by Deane. Grieve adding the goal points to give the Club a 10 points lead over their opponents.

The opening minute of the second half saw Peers, the Fusiliers' scrum-half, surprise the whole of the Club team by scoring a grand try near the left corner flag following a scrum on the half-way mark. Rice-Evans failed to improve upon it.

The Fusiliers rallied fiercely and a fine passing bout saw Davies cross the Club line in the right-corner, but Floyd failed with the kick.

The restart saw the Club press and a mistake by Davies seemed to be the signal for a general military collapse, Bidwell breaking over for an unconverted try.

TWO MORE TRIES
There was no stopping the Club from then onwards and further tries came from van Leeuwen and Deane, Grieve adding the goal points in both cases.

After the game His Excellency the Governor congratulated both teams on a fine display and shook hands with each member of the winners and runners-up after handing the Blarney Stone Shield to A. F. Watken, the Club captain.

S. CHINA "A" BEAT RECREIO BY ODD GOAL IN GRIM STRUGGLE

CLUB AGAIN WIN OVER NAVY LUCKY GOAL BY FOWLER DECIDES ISSUE

FOLLOWING their success of last week, when they beat the Navy by two goals to nil, the Club visited Causeway Bay yesterday, and in a game of fluctuating fortunes, achieved a double success by again accounting for the sailors, this time by the odd goal in five. The Club had to work hard to secure the spoils as the reorganised Navy team showed better form than was displayed in last Saturday's encounter, but they just deserved their victory.

With showery weather in the early afternoon, the turf was in a rather slippery state, and it was only with extreme difficulty that the players were able to secure a foothold on many occasions. Even so, however, they provided some entertaining exchanges and the Club must have surprised the Navy, now and then, by the excellence of their team-work.

The Club's left wing was vastly minute prior to the Navy winger's superior to the opposite.

Special praise must be given to Bickford for his pluck in playing for a good deal of the first-half, and throughout the remainder of the game, with a broken finger. Regler and Wolverson had a trying time against the active Club forwards, but on the whole provided a sturdy defence. Chen-man was easily the best of the intermediates; Lanister and Tozer leaving the heat of their work until late in the second half. Stevenson was the pick of the Navy front line, keeping the game open with well-plung passes to his wings, where both Bliman and Brewer made good use of their opportunities. Anderson was prominent in the first period, but the inside forward honours fell to Tippetts for his clever positional work during the later stages of the game.

The scoring opened from the penalty-spot. Five minutes after the start of the game Milne handled just inside the danger area and Anderson made no mistake with a powerful kick. Wolverson was responsible for the Club levelling the scores, when he elbowed F. Fowler off the ball to concede a penalty for Forrow to net. Although the Navy came more into the picture after the resumption it was the Club who took the lead, albeit a short-lived one! With the half 25 minutes old Milne fumbled a good pass from F. Fowler, but Bickford, on the alert, nipped in to beat Richie from close range. Bliman, however, straightaway cancelled the Club's lead with a fierce shot when the Navy broke through the Club defence, direct from the centre-kick. When a drawn game seemed inevitable, Fowler met a centre from Bickford to beat the Navy keeper, rather luckily, by placing the ball through a narrow gap between that player and the near upright.

AIR FORCE RIOT Service Corps Collapse

The Service Corps suffered a heavy defeat at the hands of the R.A.F. yesterday when these two teams engaged in a rather tame Third Division fixture at Prince Edward Road. The game opened with an even distribution of exchanges and showed plenty of promise; but the Service Corps were a discouraged side after conceding the first goal, and at the final whistle they had only obtained one goal to the R.A.F.'s six!

SAPPERS SHARE SPOILS

The Engineers were fully extended in their Third Division encounter at Chatham Road, when they succeeded in sharing the points with the European Police by virtue of a goal secured midway through the second half.

Taylor as the Police outside-left was the outstanding member of both elevens, his remarkable first-time shooting being the greatest source of worry to the Sappers' defence.

Wheeler opened the scoring when he sent in a powerful shot that Marvin reached but failed to hold. The Sappers missed a glorious chance to equalise when Cross-

GUNNERS TOO GOOD FOR THE ATHLETIC

Baylor Plays Well In Centre

A very meagre attendance witnessed the Second Division game between the Athletic Juniors and Stonecutters at Caroline Hill. The game was in favour of the Gunners almost throughout and their victory by 3 goals to 1 was fully deserved.

Baylor made plenty of headway and led the Gunners well, while he was supported very well by his wings, particularly by Smith the left-winger. Oliver was the better inside forward and beat Tam Kim-she, the Athletic right-half, on almost every occasion.

The Artillery crossed over a goal up, Baylor finding the net with a good drive from close range.

Baylor added the second goal with an easy shot from a pass by Smith. Wai Foo-keen replied for the Athletic and Sumner obtained the Gunners' third and last goal just before the final whistle.

by failed to convert a "spot-kick" awarded for "hands." McCaffrey, however, eventually added the equaliser with a long-range shot.

BRILLIANT PLAY BY SOUZA

FUNG KING-CHEONG AS BRAINS OF ATTACK

ALTHOUGH THE DECIDING GOAL DID NOT ARRIVE UNTIL A FEW MINUTES BEFORE THE END, SOUTH CHINA "A" WERE FULL VALUE FOR THEIR 3 GOALS TO 2 VICTORY OVER RECREIO IN THE SEMI-FINAL ROUND OF THE SENIOR SHIELD AT SOOKUNPOO YESTERDAY, AND IT WAS ONLY THE SPLENDID GOALKEEPING OF SOUZA THAT DEPRIVED THE CHINESE OF A SUBSTANTIAL LEAD BEFORE THE HALF TIME WHISTLE.

Time after time, after his full backs had miskicked, Souza came to the rescue with thrilling saves, and during the last ten minutes it looked as though he would be instrumental in thwarting the businesslike efforts of the Chinese forward line. Lee Wai-tong, however, obtained a typical goal and Recreio's visions of a fortunate draw rapidly faded.

South China opened up like a team of world-beaters, and it was a distinct shock when Recreio secured the first goal through Gossano, but it was obvious even then that with such an inadequate pair of full-backs the Portuguese could not hope to hold their lead for long. Ho Ka-keung missed a glorious opportunity in the first minute when he "muffed" a pass from Fung King-cheung, but his initial failure had no damaging effect on his subsequent play and, after securing the equaliser, he went on to cause Souza plenty of anxiety in the Recreio goalmouth.

Fung King-cheung's genius was all too evident, and throughout the game he outwitted the opposition with comparative ease, only to make the mistake of giving Lee Wai-tong too much of the ball, the centre forward, as usual, being closely attended.

TWO PLAYERS ORDERED OFF

The Kumaon Rifles secured two valuable points on the Kowloon ground yesterday when they defeated the Chinese Police in their Third Division clash by 3 goals to 1. Although they were only opposed by a team of 10 men, the Kumaon Rifles were easily the better team on the field and, led by Tomlinson, they gave an impressive display of short passing.

The game could be written down as one of the best witnessed had it not been for two rather unfortunate incidents in the second half which resulted in first Ho Sze-fan being sent off for "deliberate kicking," and then Kushna Singh, after playing a brilliant game, for "striking an opponent." Partap opened the scoring, but the Police equalised shortly afterwards through Ho Sze-fan. Not dismayed, however, the speedy Indian forwards, inspired from behind by Tomlinson in the pivotal position, went ahead through Lalal Singh before the interval and on the resumption Kushna Singh added to their tally.

SEAFORTH'S BOYS TRIUMPH

The Boys of the Seaforth High-lancers secured both points when they made their debut in the Hong Kong Schoolboys' League on the Military Ground at the Valley yesterday and defeated the Royal Ulster Rifles Boys by two clear goals.

QUEEN'S BEATEN

Although greatly improved since their game against St. Joseph's last Saturday, Queen's College again suffered defeat when they met the Flying School on the Military Ground, Happy Valley, and lost by 3 goals to 1.

Yin, the very useful left-half of the Flying School, scored all three goals for his side, while Chen Sze Ming netted the only one for Queen's. Queen's College were unfortunate in not scoring from a penalty which was awarded for "elbowing."

The Third Division encounter at King's Park provided the Fusiliers with an opportunity to consolidate their position as League leaders, and they did not disappoint, securing both points from Recreio by four clear goals.

Luxton and Tatler (penalty) scored before the interval and Riley and Tatler netted in the second half.

"SET point!" He said it at last, in the half-laughing, mocking drawl he'd been using throughout the match, but I didn't care. I was so glad it was over. Then he served and I managed to get my racket on the ball, knowing it was going into the net before I hit it — just as I'd been knowing every ball I swung at was going in the net or over the backline.

"Nice game," I said. "Sorry I couldn't give you some competition."

He didn't smile, and as he turned away to the three girls who had come with him, he tossed over his shoulder, "What was it, three love sets? I'll tell the scorer."

I started to say, "There were those two games I won in the second set," but I remembered at once that he had given me those games and so I said aloud, "Yes, three love sets."

I went across the court and found the three almost-new balls I had brought and that he had tossed aside while we were warming up — spilling out a whole boxful of his own brand new ones. When I turned, he already was moving across the lawn toward the clubhouse. He was tall but he didn't seem skinny in his flannels, and he went away with a careless swing of his shoulders, moving above the girls who kept looking into his face and smiling.

When they got beyond several courts, so that there were other players in between, I began to stop quivering inside, but I was still weak. I lay in the grass with my face in my hands, shutting out the bright, unphysical fall morning. There was nobody on the far court to see me, and I had to have a minute to think out what had happened.

Of course, I really knew what it was, because it had taken hold of me quite a few times that summer. You came on the court with your nerves and muscles set to win, but some girls appeared and right away you started watching covertly to see if at least one of them wouldn't look at you. And when the other fellow started warming up with a sweeping stroke that made the ball go "bop!" against his racket, why you started using the stroke, too, even though you knew you couldn't. And when the game started, instead of trying to get the ball back any way you could, you tried to imitate his form. In that way you finally missed one shot completely and one of the girls giggled, and you knew you looked silly and you were lost.

I stood up and started toward the clubhouse, framing what to say to my little brother Tad and Courtney and Snake, the others on the team. "After all, the man I played was seeded third this year, you know."

It sounded like something I'd said before, and I told myself absolutely I wouldn't say it this time — only that he'd licked me. But I knew I would not keep that promise.

On the third court, near the clubhouse, there was a match that was attracting the gallery, some university students and a handful of sports reporters who had come out for the opening round of the state high school tournament. Over someone's shoulder I saw it was Tad, playing a thick-eyebrowed brute of a fellow, about twice his size.

Tad always drew the gallery. He was only twelve, or maybe thirteen, and he hadn't shot up skinnily yet, as I had, and he still had to wear knickerbockers. When he wore his red school sweater with the big C on the front, about all you could see was the sweater topped by his large well-formed head. You also saw his grin, everybody knew his grin. His wide mouth always ready to laugh. I envied him his mouth. Mine was normal enough, I guess, but it seemed forever shut. They used to kid me and call me "sour puss," and I guess they were right.

The beetle fellow wasn't very good, but he'd found the way to beat Tad. He'd draw him up to the net with "cuts" and then pop one over his head and Tad would race back for it, but usually his legs couldn't quite make it. That was the way I'd beaten Tad a hundred times myself, but when I saw this fellow doing it, it made me mad. Once he got Tad up to the net, and instead of knocking the ball over his head, swung down on it with a vicious set to his mouth, banging the ball against Tad's knee. I would have gone out on the court then and hit him with my racket or anything else I had in my hand, but Tad turned back from the net, still grinning, and said the tradi-ional thing Father always made us say, "Nice shot."

In another minute the set was over and everyone was clapping, and you knew they were clapping for Tad, though he'd lost the match. I met him as he came off the court and said, "You put up a swell fight," and he looked at me and asked, "How'd you make out?" I didn't mind telling him I'd lost — because he'd just lost too. I was glad he couldn't guess that I felt that way, though.

The fellows we played in doubles that afternoon came from a small school down at our end of the state and they didn't look as though they belonged on a tennis court.

"Batter up," Tad laughed as he handed me the balls for the first serve, and I said, "O.K., let's put them out of their misery."

He crouched at the net, guarding the alley, and I threw the ball in the air, not too high this time, and smacked it full in the middle of the racket. It was a clean ace, the receiver not touching it with his racket. I was careful not to relax, as I usually do after serving one ace, and the next one was good, too. Then Tad killed a feeble return at the net, they knocked my next serve against the backstop, and the first game was over.

On their service, one of us would run to the net and the other would lay back, keeping out of each other's way. We had to rally a few points but we took the second game in the end. As we played on, my hand felt glued to the handle of the racket, but I was afraid to change the grip, it might spoil our luck. For a long time, it seemed, I didn't see anything but the bounding clay-coloured ball and the red clay court, split by white lines, and the taut net. There wasn't any sky, any people — nothing except the lines, the ball and the net. At last someone said, "set point," and I served an easy one, to make sure it went in, and Tad killed the return.

Then I heard the applause, breaking sharply on the brittle afternoon.

I don't know when the gallery arrived, or whether they had been applauding before the set ended. But now, as we changed courts, I saw there must be at least fifty people lining the edges of the court.

Sitting on the grass behind the backstop were five girls. I didn't look at them and didn't smile — but I saw them, all right. As I walked to the backstop to pick up a ball, I could feel my shoulders go set and my legs stride out, stalking, as you might say.

There was a minute while we waited for the others to get set — they had been having some sort of conference — and I guess that was the turning point. I kept toying the line and making practice swings, as I'd seen the professionals do. When they finally were ready, I drew myself up until I almost lost my balance and flipped the ball two feet high and swung my racket in a flourishing arc. That serve went clear out of the court. Then, instead of simply getting the second one in, as Father had taught us, I did the same thing again — the ball hit the middle of the net.

I knew Tad had tried to catch my eye as he shifted across the court, but I had avoided seeing him. The next serve I popped over too softly, a perfect dandy drop, a set-up, and when the return came bouncing at my feet I dubbed it with a careless sweep, as though it didn't make any difference whether we won or lost. Before serving again I rubbed my hands in the clay dust and stood frowning a moment, dramatically, pretending some obscure trouble that the gallery couldn't know about. We rallied the next point but finally lost that, too, when I tried to kill the ball in mid-air instead of waiting for it to bounce.

We lost three straight games before Tad said anything. Then, as we passed on the backline, it was merely, "Let's get down to business now." He might have said, "Quit showing off," because that was what I was saying to myself. But he didn't. He kept trying to cover up, racing wildly across the net to stop their returns before the ball came to me. I saw what he was doing and didn't like it. After all, I was supposed to be the number one man on the team.

Even then I think everything might have been all right if it hadn't been for something one of the others said. As we started the fourth game, I was gripping my racket until my hand hurt, and the people, the sky, were beginning to fade out again, as they had in the first set. I believe we might have gone on and won then if this fellow hadn't called out, so that everyone could hear, "Just keep feeding them to the tall guy, Hank, he'll miss it every time." I lashed at that serve so hard the ball went 'way over the far backstop and rolled into the street. Someone on the sidelines let out a whoop and the barefooted fellow doubled up over his racket, pretending to be convulsed with laughter.

The next ball came to Tad and this time he took a heavy swing at it himself, sending it two feet beyond the backline. It was Tad's first reckless shot, but I turned on him coldly. "Just get them in the court. That's the object of the game, you know." Of course, I was sorry I had spoken, even before I saw Tad flush and slice the air with his racket. But the damage was done.

Sometimes after that, when the ball fell between us, we'd each stand idly and inquire, "Why didn't you take that one?" Even Tad's serve, usually the one thing you could count on, began to go wild. In the end we lost that set, six-one.

The third set was the sort of thing you don't care to remember, though you've grown up and really should be able to laugh about it. At the outset we were both determined to make a stand, and we did win the first two games — by shovelling and pushing and jabbing at the ball, like the worst beginners, but getting it back. We won two games, not by playing tennis, but by playing their mistakes.

It was a sorry exhibition, and as I went back to serve the third game I noticed a quietness around the court. You could hear the soft pat of the ball as it bounced. Then I saw what was happening. Half the gallery had left already and the rest were getting ready to leave. Beyond the far backstop there were only two girls now and they were standing up, straightening their skirts.

Well, we had a two-game margin, we could afford to ease up a little. I slashed two serves into the net, hardly regretting them for the loud, professional "bop!" they made against the racket. The third serve went in, a perfect ace, but Tad, instead of saying "Nice shot," shrugged and stood at the net with his racket drooping, not prepared to hit the ball.

"What's the matter?" I called. "Didn't that suit your fancy?" I knew he hadn't grinned since the first set, but I had avoided looking at him much. Now I saw his mouth was angry, in a way I'd never seen it before, and maybe it was puckering a little, as though he could cry with rage.

"Go ahead, play the whole game yourself," he said. "You're the one that's so good."

The two girls had come around from the backstop while we were arguing. They stood near the net, watching. Nearly everyone else had left. Then, in the little stillness after Tad said, "You're the one that's so good!" one of the girls giggled and I caught the phrase, "Oh, isn't the little fellow darling?"

Of course, I saw it all, or thought I did. From the start nobody had been interested in me. It didn't matter whether I was there or in Kalamazoo. They had come to watch Tad.

What I did then is the thing I wish I could forget, or at least laugh about. I swung my racket — the faithful old racket that I'd come to love for the thousand sets it had seen me through — and threw it as hard as I could against the backstop, six feet away. It bounced from the wire and fell on the hard clay, clattering.

I went over and picked it up. Nothing seemed to be broken, but that wasn't the point. There was Father, trying so painstakingly to teach us the game, "Never lose your temper, and never throw a racket."

Tad hadn't said another word. He had taken his position at the net, his back to me, waiting for the next play. The girls were moving off and one of the other fellows was yelling, "Come on, play ball!"

A long time later the set ended, and we had lost. All four of us shook hands at the net, but when I turned Tad was gone. He was walking across the grass a little distance away, his racket trailing by the sleeve, his racket cutting at dandelion heads.

I ran after him, calling, "Tad, wait up!"

When I was almost beside him he said, "Oh, leave me alone, please."

I thought from his voice maybe he was crying. So I let him go on alone, because I couldn't stand seeing him that way and I knew he wouldn't want me to see him.

When I got to the Sig Nu house, Tad was sitting alone in the back of the car and Courtney and Snake were in front, waiting to leave. Nobody said anything for a while, but after we got out of town Snake turned to us. "Well, I hope you're satisfied." He looked at me a minute and I couldn't meet his eyes. "Huh, you guys couldn't even beat a pair of cripples if they played on crutches!"

"That's all right, we can beat you any day," I heard Tad snap. "Listen," I said, "it wasn't Tad's fault. I threw the game away."

"No, he didn't," Tad said. "We just got beat. That's all."

Then he said again, "We can beat you any day!"

I glanced aside at him, hopelessly. That sounded like the old challenge he used to throw down to anyone from us together. And I thought of the day when we had just come to a new school and I had been summoned to the principal's office from my class and Tad had been there, ostensibly to get a textbook which he had told them I had by mistake. But I knew it wasn't his textbook, and later, on the way home, he had confessed, "I just wanted to see you for a minute, Ken. They were all so strange..."

But now all that seemed a long time ago. Tad was looking away at the open country, the scrub pines fleeting past, and all I could see was his pug nose and the unusual tight look at the edge of his mouth. I started to speak, "Tad..." but he didn't turn, and I wasn't sure of what to say anyway.

I don't know, but it seems to me that from then on things were never quite the same between my brother and me.

NEVER TAKE CHANCES WITH STOMACH TROUBLE!

Few complaints are serious in the beginning.

The most common trouble today—stomach disorder—usually starts in a small way. It may attack you as HEARTBURN, BILIOUSNESS, FLATULENCE or INDIGESTION, but its meaning is always the same and so is its remedy. It is Nature's warning of a bad stomach—a stomach which is turning the very food you eat into painful, destructive acid. That is why you must never think lightly of stomach pain, no matter how slight it may be. Nature does not warn you for nothing. Waste no time. Take no chances. Act to-day and drive those pains away. Cleanse that bad stomach with the famous proven remedy—Maclean Brand Stomach Powder—and banish for good the shadow of the hospital and of the operating theatre.

Owing to the enormous success of Maclean Brand Stomach Powder in the last few years a host of imitations has sprung up to seize a share of this popularity. If you are not very careful you may find yourself buying something with a very similar name and outward appearance in place of the genuine Maclean Brand. You may be tempted by its cheapness to purchase some useless substitute. But if you want the definite, soothing relief of genuine Maclean Brand, you must avoid all imitations. Look for the signature "ALEX. C. MACLEAN" on the bottle. Every bottle of genuine Maclean Brand bears this signature—it is your safeguard against substitution and consequent disappointment. Sold in bottles in cartons. Never sold loose. Also in tablet form.

CRAFTSMEN IN PLAY

An expert contract player and a master craftsman have much in common. The same methodical planning, smooth, unhurried execution with meticulous attention to detail are found in the work of both. "Knowing their tools," they never are at a loss to select the proper one for the job at hand. It is not strange, consequently, that the finished article they turn out should be a thing of sheer beauty.

The hand described below offered no particularly weighty problem. The chief ingredient supplied by the declarer was care. But (perhaps because I am somewhat of a cynic) I wonder how many run-of-the-mill players would have fulfilled the small slam contract?

trump, the king-nine of spades, the queen of diamonds, and a low club. West had the jack-ten of spades, the king of diamonds, and the jack-ten of clubs. Dummy had the king-eight-seven of clubs, one diamond, and one spade. The lead of the last trump put West hors de combat. A club discard would establish both of dummy's low clubs. A spade discard would set up declarer's nine and put West into a squeeze, since he could not later find a discard when declarer should cash the spade nine. The diamond king would invite the same squeeze. Declarer would lay down the queen and West would again be "out of luck." Thus, the perfection of declarer's play had brought home the contract against an adverse lay of

You must have some of this FOOD-DRINK
THAT DIGESTS YOUR OTHER FOOD

IT is on your digestion that the modern pace first tells. Gradually you absorb less of the essential nourishment in your food. Appetite fails a little, sleep comes less easily, nerves begin to lose their tone, energy begins to flag. Get into the way of taking Bourn-vita regularly last thing at night. It is the one thing that will help you stay the pace—because it helps the digestion. Start on it. NOW!

How Bourn-vita helps your digestion?

One of the main ingredients of Bourn-vita is malt—a special malt rich in diastase. And diastase is a natural digestive which is able to help substantially in the most troublesome job your digestion has to do; i.e. digest the carbohydrates—the bulky, starchy foods of which about two-thirds of your diet consists. Bourn-vita itself, of course, is rich in readily digestible nourishment that your system can absorb rapidly and fully.

Better Digestion—Sounder Sleep—More Energy

As soon as you start the comfortable habit of Bourn-vita at bedtime, you sleep better, digest better, absorb more and better nourishment; and are able to start each day with far more energy and steady nerves.

PREPARING FOR THE CLIPPERS

Mr. Frank McKenzie, chief of the construction division of Pan American Airways, arrived in the Colony by the s.s. President Hoover to supervise preparation of the necessary ground facilities for the extension of the Clipper route to Macao and Hong Kong.

Mr. McKenzie left yesterday for Macao with Mr. Barnes, local representative of Pan American Airways, and is expected to return to Hong Kong within a few days.

INTERPORT HOCKEY CLASSIC

COLONY TO MEET
MACAU TO-DAY

LOCAL DEFENCE TO BE TESTED

Interest in the local hockey world to-day will be centred on Macau, where the Colony team will be playing in their third interport match since the commencement of the series.

Although the Hong Kong team is the best available, one feels that they will have to perform much better than they have hitherto done if they are to record a victory against the Portuguese team.

One of the most pleasing features of the Macau team is the inclusion of G. P. "Geoff" Lammett, in the left-back position. He has been one of the Colony's most versatile athletes, and at the moment is probably the veteran of the Macau team. It is understood that he will be taking charge of the team after the departure, for Portugal, of Lieut. F. da Costa, the founder of hockey in Macau.

In Alex Aires, the Macau team probably have a centre-half the equal of Willy Reed. Extraordinarily fast on the ball and with a wonderful eye for openings, he will be the biggest danger to Hong Kong. Lammett will be playing opposite to the Fowler-Wright combination and will be a thorn in their attack, although if the latter finds his form Hong Kong will probably score one or two goals through this player.

The Macau attack is one of the fastest in China, combining splendid stickwork with speed and marksmanship in the circle. The Colony defence, and one can rely on the intermediate line, will have a gruelling time and one need only stress the necessity for quick clearances to be on the safe side.

The following are the teams:—
Macau: — Almada; R. Rosario and G. P. Lammett; J. Nolasco; Alex Aires and Laertes da Costa; F. Nolasco, Alberto Aires, P. Angelo, H. Rosario and A. Angelo.
Hong Kong: — U. B. Souza; A. E. P. Guest and E. L. Gosano; M. H. Hassan, W. A. Reed and J. Goncalves; S. Fowler; Lt. Wright; Pyara Singh, Narsin Singh and Parab.

D.G.S. BRAWN CUP WIN

In a Brawn Cup hockey match played on the C.B.A. ground, King's Park, yesterday afternoon, the Diocesan Girls' School beat the C.B.A. by four goals to nil.

The outstanding feature of a game ruined by poor weather conditions was the fine performance of Miss Helen Boekler, who registered the "hat trick".

Miss Fitzgerald scored the fourth goal for the winners, who led 2-0 at the interval.

"Y" Ladies Win

At King's Park, the "Y" Ladies defeated the Fusilier Ladies by two goals to nil in their Cup match.

When the teams crossed over the "Y" were a goal to the good, Miss Violet Bradbury being the scorer, and the same player netted in the second half.

Miss Bradbury proved head and shoulders above the standard of the other players, although Mrs. Barnes and Mrs. Slater played well for the winners. In the full-back division, while Miss Murray also impressed on the right wing.

While coaling the s.s. Yap Kong at Shamshui-po yesterday, Hung Lam, a coolie, was injured in a fall and admitted to the G.C.H.

HOCKEY SENSATION

SELECTED

A FIRST CLASS HOCKEY SENSATION HAS BEEN CAUSED BY THE OMISSION OF W. A. REED, THE COLONY'S INTERPORT PIVOT AND FINEST HALF-BACK FROM THE INTERMEDIATE LINE OF THE LOCAL ENGLISH INTERNATIONAL HOCKEY TEAM TO MEET SCOTLAND IN THE FIRST ROUND OF THE INTERNATIONAL TOURNAMENT NEXT TUESDAY ON THE CLUB GROUND.

Another surprise is the exclusion of Lt. Wraith (Navy), who has been consistently good this season.

The following is the England team and reserves:—Benwell (Club); A. E. P. Guest (Radio) and Lt. Stilleman (Navy); Spr. Brown (R. Engineers); Lt. Davies (Navy) and C. Parker (Police); S. A. Fowler (Club); G. H. Fowler (Club); Lt. Wright (Navy); Lt. Garthwaite (R. A.) and V. Bond (Club).

Reserves:—S. A. Tremlett (Y. M. C. A.) (full-back); R. A. Bates (Club) and W. A. Reed (Club) (half-backs); Lt. Wraith (Navy); J. Pennell (Police) and Lt. Battersby (Navy) (forwards).

Under the rules of the tournament the matches must commence sharp on the scheduled time and England players are asked to try and be on the field before 5 p.m. Should any player be unable to play, he is asked to communicate with Lt. N. W. Metcalfe, R.A., R. A. Mess, Kowloon.

Fusilier Success In Tournament

The Fusiliers beat the Engineers by two clear goals in the Senior Division of the United Hockey Tournament at Sookunpo yesterday afternoon.

Capt. W. L. Gwyder-Jones, at inside-left, netted the first goal, and Fus. Vaughan, at centre-forward, added the second after the interval.

The European Police are leading in the Tournament.

WELSH HOCKEY TRIAL THIS MORNING

A Welsh international hockey trial will be held at Shamshui-po Barracks this morning commencing at 10.30 a.m., following which the team to represent Wales in the local international tournament will probably be selected.

A TALK ON RIDING

MR. PETER SIN ON FORWARD SEAT

An interesting talk on a much-discussed subject, the Forward Seat in horsemanship, was given by Mr. Peter Sin at the Kowloon Riding School yesterday.

Among riding people, he said, a good deal is heard of the pros and cons of the forward seat.

Twenty years ago it was considered correct to treat your saddle as an arm chair, and to lean back a little when cantering, thrusting your feet forward. This was the old fashioned seat.

The forward seat is actually the introduction of mathematical science to riding.

The term is usually associated with the word Italian, because this method of riding originated, according to authoritative sources, in Italy. Lending books tell us that Captain Frederico Caprilli, a cavalry officer in the Italian army, revolutionized the system of horsemanship and developed this type of seat as the result of indefatigable study.

It was afterwards adopted in the Italian Cavalry and is now taught by the Pinerolo and Tor di Quinto, the two world famous cavalry schools in Rome.

Mr. Sin went on to explain the principles of this method of riding, pointing out that crouching miserably over a horse's neck looking, if not feeling, both frightened and unhappy.

Concluding, the speaker said: The forward seat being logical and based on science, the opposition against it is weakening. We all know the opposition that science invariably meets with, in whatever direction it attempts to advance, and we all know the type of person who claims that what was good enough for his father is good enough for him. Nevertheless, science always wins in the long run, and we may be quite sure that forward seat has come to stay.

A vote of thanks was proposed by the Italian Consul, Comm. A. Bianconi, at the conclusion of the talk.

INTERESTED AUDIENCE
Among those present were:—Hon. Mr. and Mrs. Leo D'Almada jr., Mr. C. D'Almada, Mrs. S. P. M. Anderson, Dr. and Mrs. R. A. Inato, Miss J. P. Dalziel, Miss G. Elliott, Dr. and Mrs. Feilly, Mr. John Braga, Mr. and Mrs. E. Franks, Mr. J. Hoare, Capt. E. P. Julebin, Mr. J. Roy, Miss P. Loebeby, Mr. and Mrs. F. G. Maunder, Mr. V. V.
